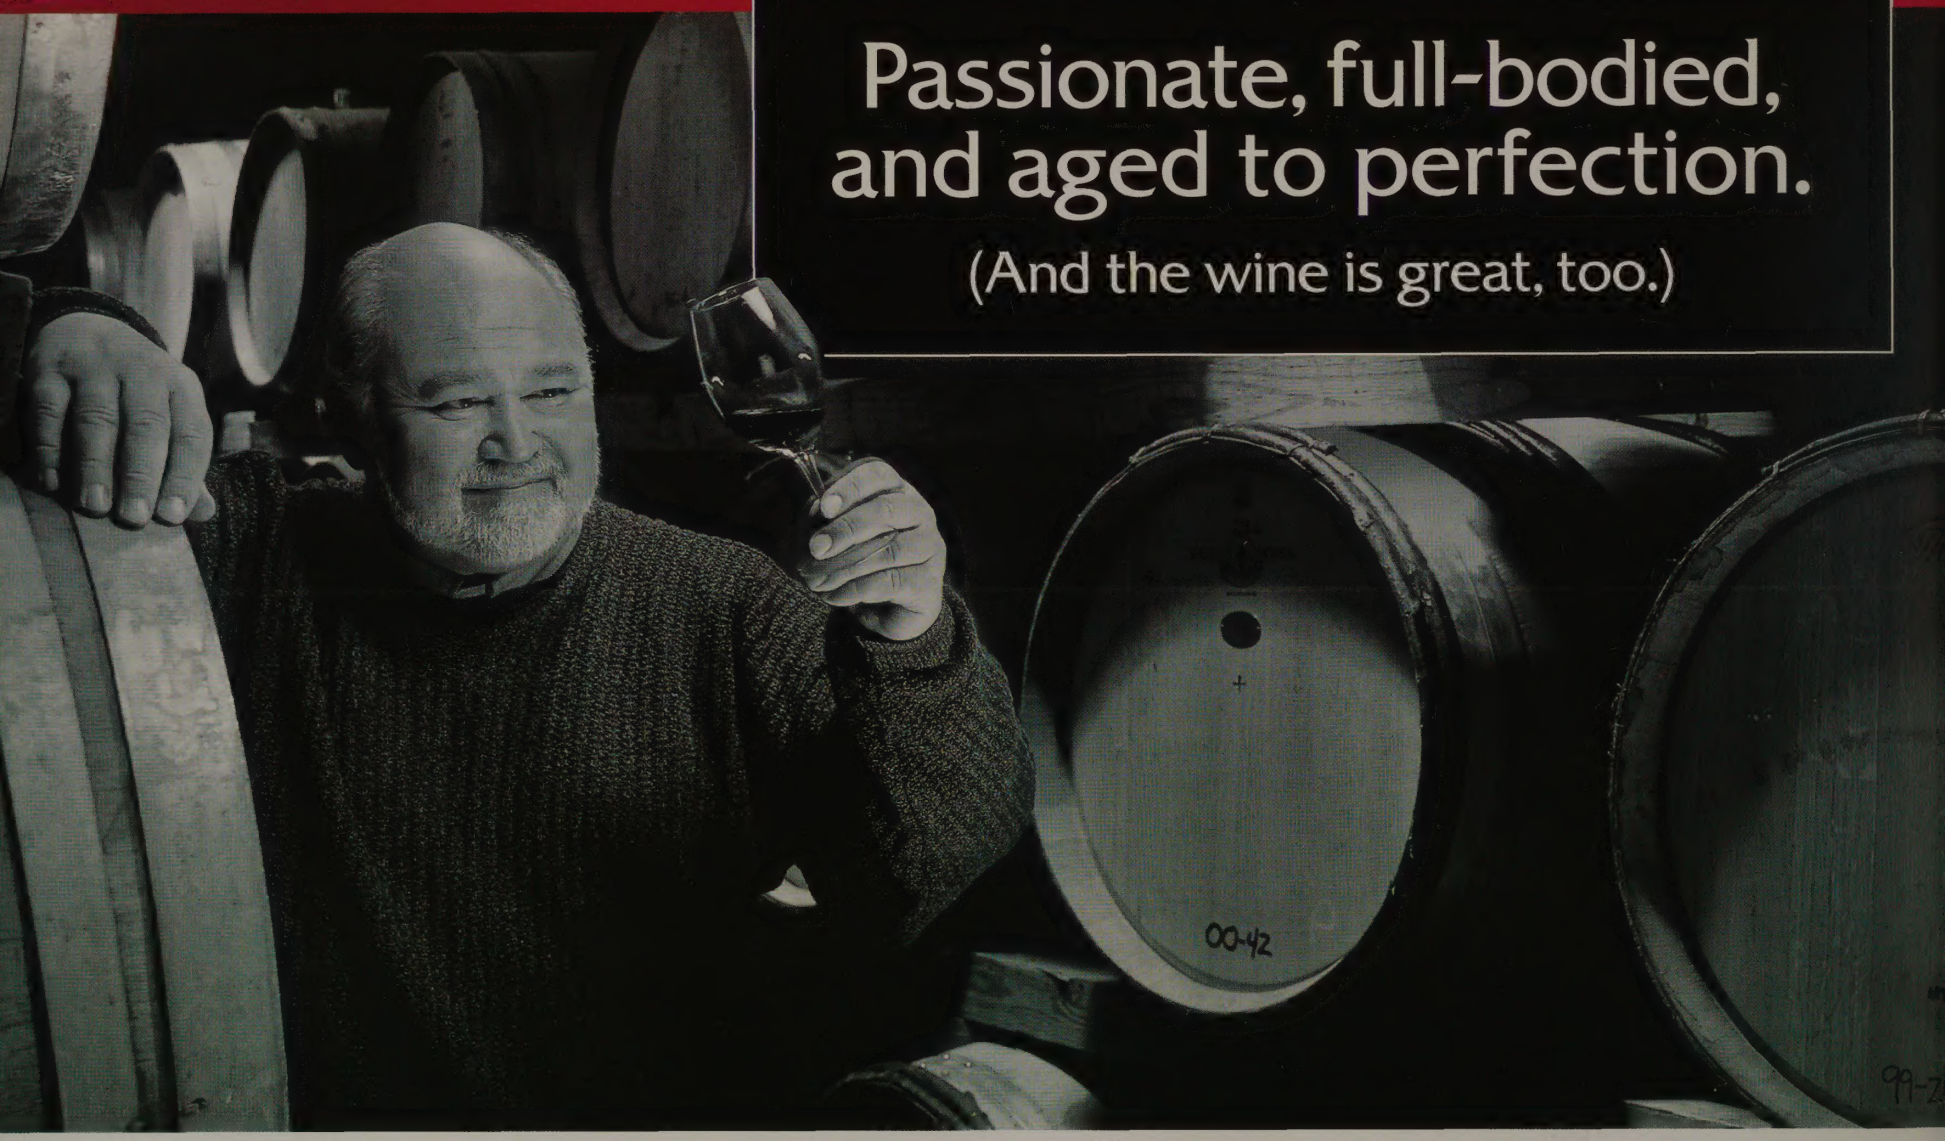
Galluccio Estate Vineyards

Passionate, full-bodied, and aged to perfection.

(And the wine is great, too.)



Meet Vincent Galluccio.

Just as a Stradivarius needs a gifted musician to make it truly sing, so too does a fine wine require a passionate presence to nudge its quality from merely excellent to exceptional.

At Galluccio Estate Vineyards, Vince is creating a special environment. One that has paid homage to the 16 year legacy of the award-winning Gristina vineyard while ushering in a new era of unprecedented vitality and sophistication to the Long Island North Fork wine growing region.

So, we hope the next time you're looking for something with a tantalizingly robust body and an excellent nose, you'll think of our Vince...so to speak.

APRIL SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Can Our Local College Basketball Team Beat The #1 Seed In The NCAA?

By Dan Rattiner

Last Wednesday evening, I watched a nationally televised basketball game on NBC between Connecticut and Long Island University. It was on television because Connecticut every year fields the number one women's basketball team in the nation, and this year was no exception. The other reason it was on television all over the country was that this was the opening round of the NCAA tournament that crowns the national champion every year. If Connecticut could beat Long Island University, it would advance to the next round and play either Maryland or Colorado State and if they won that and then the four final rounds after that, they would be crowned, once again, the greatest basketball team in the nation.

From this perspective, therefore, Long Island University was a stumbling block, the first of five. Any one of them, in just one game, would knock Connecticut out. The crown would go to Purdue or Notre Dame or one of the other powerhouses that could make it to the final.

My own perspective on this is that Long Island University is our home team. Southampton College is part of LIU And though I had never watched the women's team play, I figured that maybe they could do the impossible. I root for people who try to do the impossible. I don't know why. Just maybe LIU could pull it off.

I turned on the TV before the game to listen to a little commentary. The teams were not yet out on the court. Two guys were talking. Did the Long Island girls have a chance? Not a snowball's chance in hell, one of them said. They hadn't made it into the NCAA tournament in a generation. In the regular season they had won 16 and lost 14. They were the very bottom team to qualify for the tournament. They were way over their heads trying to stop Connecticut. After all, some of these Connecticut women had been on the front of cereal boxes.

> And though I had never watched the women's team play, I figured that maybe they could do the impossible. I root for people who try to do the impossible.

Well, they had won 16, I thought. If a team can win 16, they can win 17. This could be the upset of the century. Go get 'em Long Island.

And then the starting players for the two teams trotted out onto the court and I saw what was meant by Connecticut being way over their heads. The Connecticut people all looked like female Michael Jordans. The Long Island girls looked like people who happened to stroll down the street when somebody with a ball was hoping to put together a game on a school playground on the corner.

Well, they'll just have to go around them, I thought. Or under 'em.

"...so Connecticut comes into this tournament as the Number One seed," an announcer was saying, "having a near perfect record of 27 wins and 2 defeats."

"It's just the matter of the score," the other announcer was saying. "I don't think anybody is giving Long Island much of a chance."

So they lost 2, I thought.

The game began. Connecticut won the tip, ran down the court and scored. Long Island threw the ball in bounds, Connecticut stole it and scored. Long Island threw the ball in bounds again, Connecticut stole it again and scored again.

I turned the TV off, wandered into the kitchen and asked Cathie if I could help her with dinner. She said sure.

One hour later, one of our boys came in and asked if I was watching the Connecticut-Long Island University game. I said I had been. He said they're setting all kinds of records and I ought to see it.

Could it be?

I went back into the study and flipped on the TV. The game was still going on. But in the upper Alec Baldwin of Amagansett wrapped up shooting of The Devil and Daniel Webster last week. Baldwin has been seen all over the place, making movies, hosting TV shows, working with his mother raising money for breast cancer research. The Devil and Daniel Webster is his first directorial effort.

Robert F. X. Sillerman may not be a movie star, but nevertheless this Southampton resident managed to make the cover of a magazine. He is featured on the cover of the current issue of Long Island University Magazine, to which he has given considerably of his time and fortune.

Another cover boy is Julian Schnabel of Montauk who is featured on the cover of The New York Times Magazine this past Sunday.

Rock star Billy Joel is tickled pink that a remake of his 1983 hit "Uptown Girl" has now made it to Number One in England. It's being performed by an Irish band known as Westlife, and for the video they have chosen as the "Uptown Girl" not Christie Brinkley (who Joel later married) but Claudia Schiffer.

The most watched TV show during the year? Move over, Superbowl. The Academy Awards broadcast makes the world stand still, at least for that one glorious night. We were thrilled to see Marcia Gay Harden (looking beautiful in strapless red) win for Best Supporting Actress category for her work in local boy's Jackson Pollock's film. Oscar passed on Ed Harris. All in all, Oscars were fair across the board recognizing nearly all films that were nominated.

Here's what our latest patients are saying....

• When I first went to see you about having my eyes done, I told you my greatest desire was to be able to enjoy theatre again by seeing the faces of people on stage. This week I have been to two events, less than two weeks after my surgery, and that wish has been granted.....

• I must admit that I was somewhat apprehensive about the final outcome of the surgery, I am very glad I had it done. Now I realize with great happiness that this was the right choice for me. The old fear of losing my eyesight or having complications because of it, seem very laughable now.
As a patient and psychologist I want you to know that your professionalism, reassurance and caring before, during and after the surgery are greatly appreciated. Besides being a physician you are a true gentleman. You can be sure that I will recommend you enthusiastically to anyone who talks to me about LASIK surgery.

right hand corner, there was the score, the quarter and the time left and I could see I was just catching the tail end of it. There was one minute and seventeen seconds left. It was the fourth quarter. And the score was Connecticut 101, Long Island University 27.

And right on schedule, the announcers were talking about the records that Long Island University was setting.

"Twenty-seven points is the fewest points in the history of the NCAA tournament," one of them said.

"And I think its a record that Connecticut scored the first 17 points before Long Island could score. That's a record."

"Certainly is. And I've just been told Long Island has set the record for the least amount of points scored in a half. They set the record this half."

What astonished me, however, was what was going on on the court as the clock ticked down. Connecticut was playing just as hard as they had played when I had seen them in the opening quarter. And Long Island was playing even harder. A shot went up and missed, and there was a scramble for it, and a Long Island player came up with it. Connecticut was all over her. But she got the ball away and down the court a Long Island girl came once again. There were twenty seconds, fifteen seconds, and then a drive to the basket and a terrific final shot by Long Island and the number 27 went up to 29. Then came the buzzer. Final score Connecticut 101, Long Island University 29.

My hat is off to these Long Island girls. It is true I missed the middle of the game, but there they were, in there, in Connecticut's face — or midsection — right to the final buzzer. Outclassed, overmatched, way over their heads, they showed no quit.

The only downside to all of this has been what has been in the daily papers around the nation during this tournament. Editors have gotten into the habit over the years of devoting an entire page to the tournament schedule every day, with each day, a little more of it filled in until the final day when it is all filled in.

In other words, for the entire week and a half of the tournament, every day, the results of every game played are right there — Duke 87 Clemson 82, Penn 71 North Carolina 70 and Connecticut 101 Long Island 29 — every day.

Well, here's what I've got to say to you Long Island. Girls, we are proud of you. You made the tournament this year, as the last seed, last in and first out. Next year you'll do better. And soon there will come a year when you can meet Connecticut in the final and get your revenge.

In the meantime, concentrate. Grow TALL. •

Sun, Surf, Birds, Wind, A Pond And A Sunset On An Extraordinary Day

By Dan Rattiner

Last Friday afternoon in the summer cottages, as the gardeners and landscapers were doing their final trimming and mowing and the cleaning people were making final preparations, I drove down to the beach as I do every day for a few hours, this time, because it was Friday, to watch some of the private planes – there are about forty of them – bring their cargo of rich and famous out to the Hamptons for the weekend. It was the first day of spring, a beautiful Friday with the sun lowing in the western sky in a kind of – from my perspective – blessing of Manhattan – and as I drove down I thought I will go for a run, then sit in my SUV for an hour of contemplation, watch the occasional airplanes, and otherwise enjoy why everyone says they come to this remarkable place, which is for the dunes and the sand, the surf and the sea. I would also walk around the SUV from the driver's seat to the front passenger's seat where there is more room, and do some writing. I often write on my laptop down by the sea.

Something happened that Friday afternoon at the beach, however, that I have never seen before. It was an amazement. I cannot get it out of my mind.

The beach I had gone to was one I go to frequently, at the end of Sagg Main, in Sagaponack. I drove onto the sand – I have a four wheel drive – made a right, and proceeded a few hundred yards down the beach, a large angry surf to my left, and the bright glare of the late afternoon sun directly in front of me. There was no one on the beach, although I immediately thought that there ought to be. There were hundreds of birds, mostly gulls, swirling around and cawing madly over the surf, and what it meant was that there was a school of fish there, just under the waves, that had blindly come in and was bumping into the shore and milling around trying to decide which way to go next. The birds were feeding on them. But there were no surfcasters. Yet. There soon would be, I knew, when the word got out.

There also was a wind coming from my right to my left, across the sand, and it was doing what that always does, which is to hold up the waves in a kind of chiffon. Spindrift would fly off them, curling backwards to fall back into the sea behind the wave. There would be surfers in wetsuits, soon, perhaps.

Then I saw what I had never, ever seen before. I would do no writing. (This is written the next day.) I would not walk around. I simply enjoyed, for the next half hour as the sun began to set, the most astonishing thing I have ever seen at the beach.

I thought here to just describe it. But it occurs to me that it would make no sense unless you knew the elements, some of them natural, some of them man made, that had created it.

At three locations in the Hamptons, in East Hampton, Sagaponack and Mecox, there are large ponds that are a mile across from east to west and, from north to south, three to four miles long. They are named Georgica, Sagg and Mecox Pond. These ponds, under normal circumstances, have no outlet to the sea, although at their southern ends they are just a hundred yards across a low dune from the ocean. When it rains, these ponds, which are so vast, slowly fill up with water. Before modern man arrived, they would overflow their banks and create swamps along the shore before finally spilling over the sand and into the sea. It is easy to imagine the natural "letting" of these ponds, with the great torrent of water making an ever deeper trench, until the ponds would eventually be almost dry to start the process over again.

Today it is a different story. Many wealthy New Yorkers, some of whom were in the airplanes moaning above that very afternoon, have huge mansions fronting onto these ponds. And so, today, when the ponds rise and get to a certain height, the Town Trustees come in with steam shovels and bulldozers, and they dig a trench to "let" the pond. I might note they dig the trench first, dry, and only when it is complete, break the dam to let the pond come through. It charges out, at first, in a torrent. This lasts one or two days.

(A great time for surfing, tube-ing, rafting). Then it slows to a gentle flow. Then it flows in and out with the tide and it starts filling in. Then it heals.

(Before the invention of steam shovels and bulldozers, all able bodied men in the town had to go down there with shovels. The church bells would sound. Those that didn't go and had no excuse spent time with their heads in the stocks. Read about it in old town records.)

That first Friday afternoon of spring, with the wind up and the sun setting, the "let" was a twenty foot wide river flowing gently outbound. As I arrived at it, I stopped the car, obviously. There would be no crossing this in a motor vehicle.

I got out of the car to admire the surf and the birds. And then it happened. A large wave, off to my left out, threw off spindrift and as it broke headed into the river. It rumbled up the river from left to right, slowly, very slowly, into the stillness of the pond and then off into the distance heading north. Above it, and accompanying it, were about a dozen birds, flapping and calling, sometime caught up in the spindrift that still rose, like spit, from the crest of the wave.

I can still see it in my mind. The whole thing had gone on for at least five minutes, a huge amount of time for one continuous wave. Out in the ocean, where I had first seen it, it was about eight feet high. It was still two feet high when it entered the river, and it was still more than one foot in height as it noisily headed off into the distance more than a mile away. As far as I am concerned, this wave could still be going, crossing slowly under the Montauk Highway and heading up into Sag Harbor, still accompanied by the birds and still throwing off spindrift. It might take a day or two.

Waves come in threes, is what I thought.

I keep a camera in the car. I got back in, found it, checked the film, waited.

When the second one came, which was about a minute later, I took pictures of it. In fact, I took a whole roll of it as it passed – I had that much time – from where the river and the sea met to off in the distance in the center of Sagg Pond. I was not confident that much of the film had come out though, because as it passed in front of me I was shooting directly into the sun, which by this time was on the horizon forming a sunset of reds, oranges and gold.

When the third one came, it was a scene from another world. I was in the middle of a wild scene of birds and diamonds, flying froth and swirling sand, the rushing of the wave accompanied by the cawing of the birds as they flapped along overhead accompanying the spindrift from left to right, or just circling madly around, noting once again for the first time the red ball of the setting sun. I took a picture and the flash went off. This would not come out. I took no further pictures. I just ran around on the shore, whooping and hollering.

I waited awhile after this, but three is all there was. Why three? A passing oil tanker on the horizon? A natural phenomenon? I have no idea.

What I did know, checking the tide table I keep in the glove compartment of my car, was that the tide was coming in, and we were halfway between low and high. What must have been happening, with the slow flow out into the sea, was this powerful wave coming in on the surface, slowed and held up by the wind, but still coming. And coming. And coming.

I had been alone. No one else had seen all this. I thought that here along the shores at the very head of the pond, there were no houses at all, and so no other lucky oceanfront types, some of whom I might have known, who might have said, yes I saw it and it was extraordinary or no it was no big deal this happens all the time.

I had never seen this happen before. I drove home. Two planes were buzzing in along the beach. Soon there would be private dinner parties, an evening out at Bay Street or Guild Hall, an elegant fundraiser in somebody's honor.

The surf, the sand and sea, in recent times, though still celebrated, have become far away things to the rich and famous. The truth is you really don't see them out there on it much, even in the summertime in the daytime. There is so much else going on.

I drove home in silence. I tried, briefly, in words, to say what I had experienced just a few minutes before, but I could not do it. There was a movie on TV. The teenagers were getting ready to go out. There was talk of going to a restaurant for dinner. Day to day reality returned.

And that was that. •

Internet Horror

Will Readers Buy Chapter After Chapter If The Writer Threatens Not To Finish?

By Dan Rattiner

About two years ago, horror author Stephen King published a short book online entitled Riding the Bullet. More than 400,000 people downloaded it, paying, on the honor system, $10, to Stephen King.

In Manhattan, home of the vast majority of bookpublishing companies in America, knees shook. The handwriting was on the wall. Ordinary book publishing, where there is marketing, advertising, editing and an actual book, might be a thing of the past.

Not quite.

Stephen King followed up Riding the Bullet with something called The Plant, a story of a horrifying plant that grew and grew and began to devour employees in a book publishing company in New York.

This time, however, King took a different approach to getting his book out. He wrote the first chapter and posted it on his internet site. Then he invited readers to download it, paying him $1 for the chapter. Again it was on the honor system, but this time, King warned, he would only write a second chapter if at least 75 percent of the downloaders paid the dollar.

"If you pay, the story rolls. If you don't, the story folds," King wrote on his web site, apparently trying to sound like Johnnie Cochran.

Considering that 400,000 people had downloaded Riding the Bullet, King was surprised to find that only 120,000 people were willing to download one chapter of a book when the author was saying he might never write more than that one chapter. Haydn's "Unfinished Symphony" was one thing. But a chapter where a plant eats a publishing executive and then you don't know what happens next was quite another.

Still, 120,000 people is a lot of people, and if more than 75 percent of them sent Stephen King a dollar than he had gotten $90,000 free and clear for just one chapter. He wrote a second chapter. But just 40,000 people downloaded it, and apparently less than 75 percent paid for it.

King has declared he will therefore not write a third chapter. At least for now.

Representatives for Stephen King point out that in the past he has set aside writing one story or another for months, even years at a time. He invariably returns to them. He will surely return to "The Plant."

Maybe.

In some ways, this story about storytelling reminds me of some of the times that I start to tell stories. I rumble along, savoring the details.

"Get to the point," Cathie will say.

"It'll cost you a dollar," I'm going to say next time. •

ARROGANCE OF POWER SETTLES IN THE WHITE HOUSE

By Dan Rattiner

Somebody recently said that George Bush's idea of ethnic diversity was to hire people from different oil companies. His Vice President for example.

That hasn't happened, exactly, of course, but when Republicans Condolezza Rice, Colin Powell and some of the others sit around the table at the daily cabinet meetings, the rule is that once a decision is made by the man running the meeting, everybody gets in line and pulls together.

I am not so sure that everyone is happy about this.

In his first few months in office, here is the kind of Presidency George W. has begun to conduct. He has told the Russians that money to get their democracy in shape may not be so forthcoming. He has told the Europeans that he wishes to withdraw American troops from the peacekeeping mission in Kosovo. He has told Israeli President Sharon that the Israelis and the Arabs will have to work things out more among themselves. And he has announced that his primary concern will be his relationships with our immediate neighbors, Mexico and Canada.

Along these lines, it is interesting to note that he has yet to name an Ambassador to either Japan, France, Russia or Germany. On the other hand, he has spent considerable time seeing to the appointments of Appelate judges who share his conservative views. He needs judicial support for the anti- environment, pro-business changes he has begun to pursue, quite predictably, as a Business First Republican. He intends the rich to pay fewer taxes, the water and air to be less regulated, our national energy resources to be more readily consumed and our forests more readily cut down.

Personally, as I noticed during the campaign, both he and Dick Cheney literally talk out of the sides of their mouths. It is a nasty thing to see because it is about as close as you can come to grinning and winking to who you are talking to — as in, well, you know, we're in charge now. And what we are about is unspoken, of course.

One day after Al Gore conceded defeat, I thought, for the first time, that I had gotten a glimpse of George Bush's true personality, beyond what the marketing people and the speechwriters had given him. He was walking from one meeting to another, and a group of reporters and cameramen were dogging him. His anger flashed and he made a disparaging remark. Do you want to modify that? a reporter asked. Yeah, right, he said. Go scratch.

And then last week, at a meeting with the press, a cell phone in the gallery began beeping. Bush turned to an aide.

"Are you who they put in charge of cell phones?" he asked.

The aide mumbled yes he was.

"You didn't do a very good job getting them turned off, did you," he flashed.

I have been watching the military hearing about that naval accident, where an American submarine surfaced and accidentally overturned and sunk a Japanese fishing boat with the loss of nine lives. The officers from the submarine show up at the hearing in their dress whites, all spit and polish, as if this were some military parade they were attending. They stand erect, proud and formal, and, their hands clasped behind them and hanging their heads, apologize. They had taken their hands off the wheel.

They had taken their hands off a whole lot more than the wheel. There was a party going on. A group of civilians were on board, big contributors to the Bush campaign, oil men, friends of George W., and in the course of things, crowding into the operations room, (holding their drinks? girls fawning all over them?) they had caused the ship to fall a little behind schedule. They really had to get back. The Captain sped things up. Here's how we surface, here's how we turn on a dime. Want to take the helm for a little while again?

Bill Clinton, when he was President, reminded me of a man living in a residential neighborhood who goes to meetings, heads up the Neighborhood Watch group and sets up committees to deal with street cleanups, safety at school crossings and pothole repair. In the middle of this, he has an affair with a neighbor's wife.

George W. puts me in mind of a blue collar worker in the neighborhood who wants no part of community affairs. What's important in his life is what's in it for him and how he can get it. To that end, he'll establish at least a civil relationships with the people in the houses directly adjacent and other than that wants to be left alone with his family. He runs it with an iron hand, has flashes of temper, knows, he says, the difference between right and wrong and sees to it his wife, a former librarian, keeps the household organized and running the way he wants it.

George W. is no kindly Ronald Reagan with a grand plan and strong powers of persuasion. He is not even his father, who though lacking in a grand plan, was a good guy. George W. is so far putting the shields up, putting a fence around his property and exhibiting small minded behavior. This is not what you want in the White House when the country, and the world, wobbles into a spasm of economic uncertainty.

Well, maybe I am being too hard on George W. He's only been in office a few months. Maybe he'll turn out to be just what the doctor ordered. Time will tell. •

Tale Of Three Cities

Will The Citizens Of Southampton Village Declare Themselves A City?

By Susan Simm

When I called Long Beach City Hall the other day, I was asked by the person on the other end what the nature of my call was. "I have a few questions," I said. "Like what?" asked the voice. "Like, why did Long Beach become a city in the first place?" I said. After a pause the voice retorted, "Because otherwise we'd still be just a sandbar?"

While Southampton Village is more than a sandbar, the idea of becoming a city is a hot issue at Village Hall these days.

Mayor Romanosky, who has been working on this project since last year, believes that much will be accomplished over the summer toward the goal of making Southampton Village into the third city on Long Island, next in line after Long Beach and Glen Cove in Nassau County.

Why now? "This is basically a tax issue," said the Mayor in a recent interview. Since his election two years ago, the mayor has been "surprised" to find that the relationship with Southampton Town is pretty much one way. Money goes out, but not many services come back.

As of last July, the Village's annual tax contribution to the Town coffers was about $2.3 million. This equaled about 17% of the total revenues collected by the Town. If the Village succeeds in becoming a city, this obligation would be eliminated, leaving $2.3 million additional funds for the Village's exclusive use and a sizable hole in the Town's total collectable revenues.

A controversy over the Hampton Bays Water District was a strong impetus for action.

Up until a few months ago, Southampton Village was paying $16,000 a year in taxes to the Water District, including 116 residents of Meadow Lane who had not been served by the District in decades. In June of last year, the Village was going to bring litigation against the Water District and Mayor Romanosky was going to ask the Town to join in before he learned a few interesting things. Such as the fact that the Water District Board and the Town board, including Supervisor Cannuscio, were one and the same.

> Mayor Romanosky believes that much will be accomplished over the summer toward the goal of making Southampton Village into the third city on Long Island.

"Excuse me," said the Mayor as he approached the Town Board, "the Village of Southampton is going to sue the Hampton Bays Water District and we would like the Town Board to join us in this lawsuit to do what's right for our residents." They told him, "Maybe you don't know this..." and the Mayor said, "Yea, I'm aware of that, but this has been going on since 1936 and I think that, after 64 years, enough is enough."

"Have they thought about becoming their own country?" Mr. Cannuscio quipped to the press last summer. "They could drill their own wells!"

But after the Village added the fact that they were suing, not only to be removed from the water district rolls, but also for all of the monies lost over those 64 years, "Mr. Cannuscio got on board and said, 'This is wrong,'" said the Mayor. "And the Town Board members decided that, even if wasn't wrong, they saw the light because they were advised by their legal team that they could lose the suit, and with it, millions and millions of dollars because of the back payments that were involved."

As of the next billing cycle, the 116 Meadow Lane residents will not pay the Hampton Bays Water District, for services that they have never received, for the first time since 1936.

Reasons for becoming a city here on Long Island haven't changed much over the last 80 years. On Long Island's North Shore, heart of "Gold Coast" country, Glen Cove became a chartered city, the first on Long Island, in the year 1918 for many of the same reasons that Southampton Village seeks to be today.

According to the February 24, 1917 edition of the Glen Cove Echo, benefits of a city charter are enumerated as follows: "It would eliminate the payment of all Town Taxes, provide for the present and insure future control and development of public schools, provide for more economy in Water Taxes, place the levying of taxes and expenditures of moneys under the direct control of the taxpayers of the city and would 'put Glen Cove on the map' and give this community the prominence it warrants."

In a pamphlet put out by the Mayor's office to commemorate the city's tricentennial in 1968, it plainly says that, "By the time of WWI, it was apparent to many of our citizens that the services we were receiving from the Town [Oyster Bay] were far from commensurate with the tax money they were collecting." This is, precisely, one of Mayor Romanosky's major complaints.

"The main advantage of becoming a city is self-determination," said Deputy Mayor of Glen Cove Anzelmo Graziosi in a recent telephone interview. "We have tremendous control over what happens locally. Glen Cove is lucky in the sense that we are a relatively small community. Thus, autonomy works well here. If you aren't an independent municipality, your community is at the will of the township, which doesn't always have the community's interest at heart."

John Macari, City Controller, added; "Probably the single, biggest advantage of being a city is the sovereignty, having more control. We have the same sovereignty as the county or the state. This status also facilitates the process of receiving federal and state grants and funds."

The other Long Island city, the "sandbar" known as Long Beach, was originally an 'island made entirely of white sand' and was sold by the Marsapegue and Rockaway Indians to the Englishmen John Carmen and Robert Fordham in 1643. In 1931, a tragic event occurred that would make Long Beach nationally famous overnight. The body of a beautiful young woman, known as Starr Faithfull, was found clad only in a silk dress on the beach early one morning. Her family's money came from an indeterminate source and it was rumored that she had been seduced by a wealthy Boston politician, at the age of eleven, and had then received a large sum of 'hush' money. Legend has it that her ghost still walks the beach at certain times of the year.

Long Beach became Long Island's second city in 1942 and, amid a sea of controversy four years later, did away with the mayor's position and went to a City Manager's form of government. Today, the residents elect five City Councilmen who then appoint a City Manager.

The only other attempt by a Long Island municipality to become a city was a failed effort made by the Town of Islip about 10 years ago. Town Supervisor Frank Jones put together a group to study the possibility of becoming a city but the idea was abandoned at the end of his administration. No one talks much about this event today.

Currently, Southampton Village is forming a Charter Commission to see how much money becoming a city is going to cost. According to Mayor Romanosky, a lot of people want to see this happen and "have assured us that private donations will be raised" to pay for this preliminary process. Representative Fred Thiele has written the legislation for the bill and will be presenting it to the State Assembly shortly.

Last year, Supervisor Cannuscio was "somewhat supportive" of the idea on the basis that he felt that as a community leader, Mayor Romanosky should look at options that best benefit his residents. Mr. Cannuscio told the press at that time that he wasn't sure of all of the implications of Southampton Village slipping "out of our steely grasp."

"Is he still pursuing that?" said Mr. Cannuscio in a recent interview. "Well, good for him! As elected officials, we should look into the best options for our citizens. The Town was also looking toward becoming part of Peconic County, separate from Suffolk County, to protect the area from 'out of town' legislators, but this issue is dormant at this point."

A politician friend of mine commented the other day when he learned about this article, "Everyone empire builds. It's human nature. Give a person a checkbook and a budget, and he'll build a political or municipal structure so strong that it'll take dynamite to undo it. If you've ever had an ant farm, you know exactly what I mean. On Long Island, our government has become a virtual 'tower of babble' where everybody hates everybody else. We need to be accountable for our actions and provide a real, accessible form of government for our residents. With a city charter, at the end of the day there is still only one mayor, one budget and one city council." From this perspective, it seems that this is exactly what Mayor Romanosky is attempting to do.

"We're not trying to beat anybody up with this, we're not trying to be nasty, we're just trying to do our jobs," said the Mayor. But as far as the issue of possible future annexing is involved, Mayor Romanosky is noncommittal. "I really don't know at this point in the game. I could do some wild guessing but... I'm not trying to scare anybody into coming after us with pitchforks. Has there been some interest, there may have been, but it's just to early to say." Maybe. But is it too early to tell? That is the $2.3 million question. •

Editor-In-Chief Concludes His European Trip With A Visit To Central Europe

By Dan Rattiner

One month ago, Cathie and I visited the Slovak Republic in central Europe. This is not the most common destination for those who travel, at least not yet. But a friend of ours, Carl Spielvogel of Southampton, had been appointed American Ambassador to Slovakia and had said, "Come on over and see what we are doing here." We went.

The Slovak Republic may be easy to find by a commercial airline pilot. You go up, you see it down below, you come down. But it is not so easy for a layman to find it on a map. About the size of Denmark, it is a landlocked country wedged in between Poland, Ukraine, Austria and the Czech Republic. It has for more than a thousand years been ruled by one or another of its neighbors, and its capital city of Bratislava has been overshadowed by Prague, Vienna and Budapest, all of which are no more than just a few hours away.

As a matter of fact, to fly into Bratislava, you don't even arrive at the international airport adjacent to that city. You arrive in Austria, at the airport in Vienna, then drive in a car about forty five minutes.

It was seven o'clock in the morning when, as agreed, we alighted from a car at the American Embassy compound on a hillside overlooking the Danube in Bratislava. There is a guardhouse and a locked iron gate, which a guard opens. Inside there are gardens and grounds —the property was built in 1600 as a vineyard — and then a four story house that has been rebuilt with all the American amenities. In the middle of central Europe, we are in a tiny postage stamp of American soil. On Embassy Row in Washington DC, there is a large, brand new building that is Slovak soil. This is the way of the world.

At that early hour, Carl himself greets us at the front door, resplendent in a tie and a dark pencil-striped, double-breasted suit. Though he has just returned from New York City, where he introduced the Prime Minister of the Slovak Republic to 1500 people at the opening of the House of Slovak Culture, and has had only a few hours rest on the plane, he has appointments to keep at the Embassy downtown and only a few minutes to spend with us at this time.

"There was a huge turn-out-the-vote effort. The democratic parties overcame tremendous apathy." And drunkenness. Alcohol is a big problem, especially in the countryside.

"The American Ambassador never sleeps," he says with a satisfied grin.

He will see us later in the day, first at the opening of an exhibition of the art of Andy Warhol — Warhol's parents were Slovaks — then at a reception for that opening at a nearby castle and finally, back at the embassy, at a dinner prepared in our honor to which have been invited the editor and publisher of the only English language weekly in Slovakia and his wife, and a prominent Slovak writer and his American wife from a suburb of Pittsburgh in northern Pennsylvania.

"I've had many jobs in my life," Carl tells us. (He was a legend in the advertising world worldwide for many years). "But this is the most rewarding."

Carl's wife is Barbaralee Diamonstein. She gives us a tour of the house. Living room and dining room that can comfortably seat twelve, both with a view of the Danube, reception area with a furled American flag on a wooden and bronze flagstaff, three guest quarters with common living room and another guest suite on the first floor with a gym and sauna. The Spielvogels own private quarters are upstairs.

There is art everywhere. Barbaralee has installed an exhibition that consists of 59 works by leading American artists on the second floor and art by Slovaks on the ground floor. She has taken forays out into the arts and crafts community of Bratislava — she will take one today — to look for new art to bring to the embassy exhibit and this decision of hers to bring local art into the embassy has electrified the Bratislav art community. No American ambassador has taken an interest in them like this before.

As a matter of fact, as we learn at the Warhol art opening, Ambassador Spielvogel has become the darling of the Slovak media. Cameramen, television commentators and reporters follow him everywhere. People ask for his autograph. He is, it appears, the second most important man in Slovakia, the first being the Prime Minister, with whom Carl has just returned from New York and Washington to set up a cultural center and meet with Washington officials.

That evening, at dinner, I learn more about this country, which is, looked at from one perspective, the newest democracy on the planet. In the seventeenth and eighteenth century, the country was dominated by the Turks and then the French.

In the late nineteenth century, the rulers were from the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Then at the beginning of the Twentieth Century, the Czechs dominated, then the Nazis and until 1992 the Soviets. Finally, in 1993, Slovakia became fully independent, but as Tom Nicholson, the editor of the weekly Slovak Spectator explained to me, they gained their independence under the domination of their Milosevic, named Vladimir Meciar. It was only a year and a half ago that a coalition of more liberal political parties, eager to embrace the western market economies, drove Meciar and his henchman out of office. Slovakia has been accepted into OECD and seems headed to become a member of NATO and the European Union, in this round.

Or is it?

The next day, I walked through the cobbled streets of Bratislava with Canadian-born Tom Nicholson — we listened to the tinkling of church bells playing a song to announce the hour and I almost expected Heidi to appear — and we talked some more. The Slovaks are used to losing out to their more powerful neighbors. They have low expectations that this will work out. And they were surprised when a coalition of minority parties formed a government to throw Meciar out of office.

"If that is true, how did that happen?" I asked.

"There was a huge turn-out-the-vote effort. The democratic parties overcame tremendous apathy." And drunkeness. There is nearly twenty percent unemployment. Alcohol is a big problem, especially in the countryside. This is also true of Russia and much of Eastern Europe.

Furthermore, there is brutality. A secret police keeps people in line. And there were, under Meciar, kidnappings and beatings — Tom was beaten once. In fact, a current article on the front page of the Slovak Spectator concerns an attempt to repeal a law put in by Meciar, which states that any government official who is convicted of kidnapping or brutality while conducting state business is automatically pardoned. And Meciar is not in retirement yet. His political party, in the last election as I said, did get the most votes. They just could not find any other party to form a government with. Now Meciar is calling for elections again.

"This is a very difficult situation," I said. And in looking through the articles in the Spectator, I saw that every one of them was hard, tough, journalism, telling the Slovak people exactly as it is. "You are a brave man," I said.

Tom reminded me that his publication only goes to the English speaking community. And it only comes out once a week. Just a minor inconvenience to the government. But he did acknowledge that in the last year and a half the economy has only gone down rather than up.

"It has to go down before it goes up in a transition like this," I said.

In our brief stay we did not get out to the countryside, which is something I would have liked to have done. But we did get to spend considerable time in Bratislava, meeting the people. They are animated and friendly. And we saw many beautiful young women in the cafes and stores.

"Many of the world's leading fashion houses are featuring models from Slovakia," someone told us. "A lot of them seem to be tall, stunning and about three inches wide."

It is not clear how much longer Carl and Barbaralee will remain in Bratislava. They will stay for as long as the President wishes. But there is a new President who is a Republican and Carl is a Democratic appointee, as are the ambassadors to Hungary, Norway and France, Peter Tufo, Robin Duke and Felix Rohatyn, all of whom have, quite by coincidence, homes in Southampton.

We left Bratislava after three days, hopeful for the country, proud that the Spielvogels have accomplished so much in such a short time.

It is a remarkable time in the Slovak Republic. We are glad we went. •

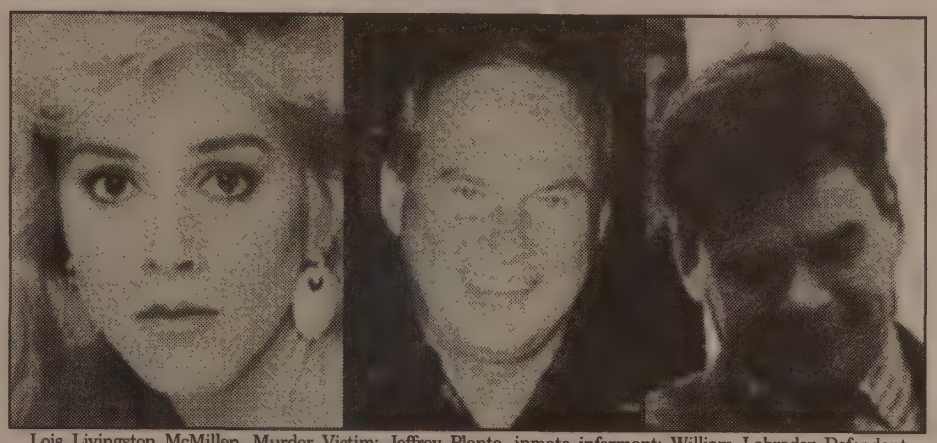
A Trial In Tortola

Will Testimony Of Former Inmate Convict Southampton Man Of Murder?

By Jerry Cimisi

"To this day the government has not produced any evidence linking my son William and his friends with with this crime," said Barbara Labrador, who had just arrived in Tortola as the government readied its case against four Americans charged with the January, 2000 murder of another American, Lois Livingston McMillen.



Lois Livingston McMillen, Murder Victim; Jeffrey Plante, inmate informant; William Labrador Defendant

It is the eleventh time Ms. Labrador has visited the small island in the Caribbean since her son's arrest early last year. A resident of Southampton, she is a member of the Southampton Town Zoning Board of Appeals. The trial date of April 2 will at least be the end to a series of government postponements; with a trial due to start last autumn, the prosecution asked for a five month delay so that 85 DNA tests could be done outside the country.

The mysterious death of the 34 year old artist from Connecticut has all the trappings of a movie, a murder mystery in the sun and fun of Caribbean Tortola. Unfortunately it is real life, and four young men have been charged with the violent death of a young woman. Each of the four defendants say the last time they saw Lois McMillen was a full day before she disappeared.

The four defendants are William Labrador, 37, of Southampton and New York, who recently had a talent and modelling agency; Michael Spicer, 37, of Virginia, who lives on a family trust; Evan George, 23, an unemployed construction worker from Washington, D.C.; and Alexander Benedetto, 35, who works for his father's publishing company in New York. Benedetto dated McMillen briefly – for three months – after meeting her in Tortola in 1997.

On the evening of Janaury 12, 2000, the four men run into Lois McMillen at Bomba's, a beachfront bar. She was known to each of them. The men were on holiday from the States, as was Ms. McMillen.

The chronology of the case, as far as it is known, goes like this: On the evening of January 12, 2000, the four men run into Lois McMillen at Bomba's, a beachfront bar. She was known to each of them. The men were all on holiday from the States, as was Ms. McMillen. She was staying with her parents and each of the men were staying at Zebra House, owned by the parents of Spicer. Zebra House and the home of the McMillens were quite close; Lois McMillen gave the men a ride home about 2:30 a.m.

The next day, January 13, three of the men (minus Benedetto) met with McMillen for drinks. McMillen picked them up and and the quartet went to Pusser's Soper's Hole. According to an affidavit by William Labrador, the group had drinks and chicken wings and left between seven and a quarter after.

Lois, Spicer and George go to Pusser's Road Town; Labrador, according to his statement, is left at a restaurant, Sebastian's, then goes to a place called Islands, where he has dinner. He leaves around ten, goes to Bomba's, then back to Zebra House, arriving around 10:45. George and Michael had returned before him.

The following day, January 14, the men, according to their statements, do not see Lois McMillen. They go hiking, she goes shopping. She buys a Versace blouse which she will be wearing that night as she takes in a blues band at Jolly Rogers Inn, a local bar. The four men go to another bar, Quito's, by taxi.

Some time that night, Lois Livingston McMillen disappears. She is last seen talking to a man at the bar, someone whom the police have not been able to track down. It is a Thursday night. Throughout Friday she is nowhere to be found; she discovered on Saturday, the apparent victim of a violent death, culminating in a forced drowning. Examination showed she had not been sexually assaulted.

Barbara Labrador is not the only one to point out that the prosecution has not been able to show any link between her son, the other defendants and the crime. When asked just why the police arrested these four Americans, Ms. Labrador said she believed it was because the authorities held the men for five days (two days past what the law allows) before charging them. "So I think they felt they had to charge them after all."

Perhaps men have been imprisoned by reasons as absurd; at any rate, since last summer, the prosecution has come up with what it feels is a telling witness. Not an eyewitness, but an former prisoner, Jeffrey D. Plante, who says William Labrador confessed to the killing of McMillen while both men shared a jail cell in Tortola.

On January 19, 2000, all four men were charged with the murder. "Then, on July 25," said Barbara Labrador," at the preliminary inquiry (which is like our grand jury) and had been postponed six times, the magistrate charged William with murder and the others as accomplices." (This charge for the others would again be revised.) Ms. Labrador added that the magistrate could not establish any link between Spicer, George and Benedetto and the murder, but her son was linked to McMillen's death by the testimony of Jeffrey D. Plante, a Texan who has been convicted of theft and writing bad checks. In 1987, Plante received a forty-five year prison sentence for felony theft. He had been paroled, but his parole was revoked in 1998. He left Texas and was serving time in Her Majesty's Prison for a charge since dismissed while Texas initiated extradition. In Her Majesty's Prison he shared a cell with William Labrador.

In a deposition Plane made last July, he stated that he overheard, from another cell, arguments between Labrador and Benedetto. "Primarily, the arguments were about who had more guilt in the crime they were charged with." He described Labrador as "screaming "at the top of his lungs."

Eventually, Labrador and Benedetto were in separate cells, and Plante was now sharing a cell with Labrador. This was at the end of January. According to Plante, he and Labrador shared a cell for "four to five months."

In the deposition, Plante said, "A few days before Good Friday during Lent I was praying and Mr. Labrador asked me whether I felt if God would forgive him if he was involved with killing someone." Plante's response was that he could refer Labrador to a priest in Road Town. Plante added that he was "not comfortable answering that question."

Though he did then ask Labrador if he had committed the murder with which he had been charged. "His answer was yes."

According to Plante, Larbrador said he and McMillen had been driving and got into a heated argument. She wanted to pull into a police station but he prevented it. "I asked him what happened to the girl and he said she was drowned; that I [Labrador] had my foot on her neck. I asked him why. He said that it was over money and that she was no good."

Plante said he not only had conversations with Labrador but with another defendant, Evan George, during recreation. "Mr. George told me that he and Mr. Spicer and Mr. Benedetto on the night of the murder had consumed a lot of drugs." When they came home they found Labrador on his bed with wet shoes. Plante adds that George said that in a while Labrador and Spicer left the house.

Plante also stated that he had conversations with and heard conversation between the other defen-

review: romeo and juliet

By Dan Rattiner

When a performance of one of the greatest plays ever written, Romeo and Juliet, occurs here in the Hamptons produced and directed by largely local talent, it is the reviewer's job to go and enjoy the show, perhaps giving allowances for the fact that a part might be played by a local merchant, and praise where you can and criticize as little as you can. One is not looking for Academy Awards.

On the other hand, sometimes even a local performance is so good that both theatergoers and reviewers are moved by the experience. When Juliet dies in the third act, in the audience there were people in tears. It is something that I have never seen before in a Shakespearean setting. Even in a more professional and polished theatre performance.

The reason for it, here at Guild Hall in East Hampton, I think, is that this production, without changing the words of the bard, put them, by inflection and by tone of voice, into an utterly modern day setting.

Or was it a modern day setting? It put one in mind of the fact that this was what the reviewers of Shakespeare at the time knew in the first place – that this writer could cut to the very quick of human emotion in a way that no others could. That he could was the triumph of his writing. That people today, ordinary people in an ordinary town, could interpret this in a way to actually reproduce these feelings was the triumph of the interpreters, and what has made this reviewer so excited about this production.

Of course, the production was not just an amateur one. Taking the role, the key role, of Juliet's nurse was Penelope Windhurst, a recent arrival in these parts who was a Tony Award nominee for her interpretation of Elizabeth I in the Broadway show of that name. She gave a fabulous performance. Also fabulous was the girl playing Juliet herself. This was Joanna Howard, just a Westhampton Beach High School girl, but one who has already launched herself on a major acting career, with credits on daytime TV soap operas and A Christmas Carole at Madison Square Garden.

That these two lifted the level of the performances there can be no doubt, but special mention must be made of Isaac Klein as Benvolio, Robert Meehan as Tybalt and Peter Fitzgerald as Capulet, Juliet's father. The direction, by Josh Gladstone, was phenomenal, the swordfight scenes by Edgar Landa were acrobatic and the costuming was authentic and lovely.

Romeo and Juliet is a play about emotions and behavior running beyond the control of the authorities (The Prince, barely keeping things within bounds, was played sternly by Adam Rattiner) with tragic consequences. People were gripped by this. Almost nobody left until the end. Go see it at the John Drew Theatre this weekend in East Hampton. •

Scott Rubenstein and Paul Annacone have announced the date of the East Hampton Indoor Tennis tournament this summer. It will be from July 7 to July 15 and will benefit Meals on Wheels, the Kendall Madison Foundation and East Hampton Day Care.

It took awhile, but Chris Whittle, who has a home in East Hampton, has finally begun to make his dream come true, which is to give a superior education to every grammer school student in America. At the present time, his Edison Schools company run 113 schools in 45 cities, and the English and math tests taken by the kids who have gone through the schools prove that they work.

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 146
SURVIVOR THREE

The very popular Survivor television show first took place in the tropics. The second edition is going on now in the Australian outback. Many people are wondering where the third Survivor is taking place. I am one of the few people who knows where the next one takes place. Shelter Island. Don't scoff. It's true. It will be the most challenging and horrific yet. Apparently many men in this country are sick to tears of hearing women piss and moan about how tough it is to run a house and manage children. Six of the toughest men in America are taking a leave of absence from their jobs to take the Shelter Island Survivor Challenge.

Six men will be set up on Shelter Island with a minivan and four children for four weeks. The children's ages are 15, 9, 3, 1. The men will not work beyond doing housework and child care.

The 15 year old will have to create and enter a major project in the Science Fair. He or she will have the entire month to do the project. He or she will have absolutely no idea what they want to do for the project. Each and every idea the Contestant has will be summarily rejected out of hand. The 15 year old will finally select a project not more than 48 hours before the project is due.

The 15 year old will also have one major literary paper to do. It will need to be fifteen double spaced typed pages. It will need to be original and not plagerized. All words must be spelled correctly. At least 5% of the project must actually be done by the teen. To increase the challenge, the Contestant will discover, during the course of the project, that the Windows 2000 program he just loaded will not run any of the Windows 95 applications on the PC. Within 1/2 hour of this discovery, the baby will develop a fever and diarrhea. The Contestant who writes the best paper for his teen under these extreme conditions, will be given an iMac for the remainder of the contest.

Each 15 year old will play two sports which require practice every day after school till 5 p.m. except Fridays. They will also take one private lesson in tennis or piano every week Saturday afternoons from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. They will not want to attend the special lesson. The Contestant must get the teen to go to the lessons without inflicting bodily harm. They will chronically harange for money, want to drive the car and try to get permission to pierce body parts, get a tattoo or dye their hair purple and/or green.

Additionally, the 15 year old will attend Open Gym every Friday and Saturday night. The youth must be dropped off at 7 p.m. and picked up at 10:30 p.m. That the contestant will be exhausted from the day and asleep on the couch by 8 p.m. is immaterial. Outside of the periodic efforts of the Presbyterian Church to create activities for the youth, Open Gym is the ONLY available activity for youth on Shelter Island in the fall, winter and spring outside of drinking, doing drugs and having sex. (How do I know? That's all there was to do when I went to high school here, only we didn't even have Open Gym.) While the teen is at Open Gym, the Contestant may not shakedown the teens room for liquor or drugs that he can take to get through the next day...

The 9 year old will have to make a replica of what the bridge from Shelter Island to Sag Harbor will look like using 500 popsicle sticks, 50 rubber bands and glue. According to the rules, the child will inform the Survivor Contestant the night before the project is due.

The 9 year old must attend Cub Scouts/Brownies Wednesday afternoons from 4 to 6 p.m. The child must wear the appropriate uniform, which must be clean. Sunday school is from 11 a.m. to 12 noon.

The child must be picked up every day from school at 2:30PM and carry a backpack that weighs as much as 25 lbs. The Contestant must keep track of Day One, Day Two. If Day One homework gets turned in on Day Two, points will be deducted. If there is a second infraction of the Day One/Day Two FUBAR system, an additional child will be added.

The 3 year old will require a very tight routine. The child will need a nap from 1 to 3 p.m. Failure to secure the nap will result in a cranky toddler from which there will be no reprieve. The Contestant will not be permitted to lock himself in a closet to escape the toddler. The Contestant will not be permitted to lock the toddler in the closet either.

The toddler will be fixated on one Disney movie. It will be the only movie the Contestant sees for the whole time he is here. The movie will start within five minutes of the toddler getting up. It will be rewound and played all day. While it is being rewound, the toddler will scream because the movie is not on. Whenever the Contestant is not looking, the toddler will strike or bite the baby.

The 1 year old will require constant supervision. The baby cannot be more than six feet from the body of the Contestant for the duration of the contest. The baby will need something, food, toy or changing every 15 minutes for the duration. The Contestant will redefine Happy Hour as a nap.

The Contestant will cook, do laundry, listen to telemarketers, shop, pick up and clean, get the mail daily, keep the recyle separated and visit the recycle and garbage once a week.

In his spare time, the Contestant will fix his hair and apply cosmetics daily, shave his legs, check body parts for cancer, remember to floss, and be ready for sexual encounters as soon as all the children are asleep. Just remaining conscious during sex does not count as participation.

Contestants may quit whenever they want on the condition they find someone to take the children. The winner is the one who gets to the end of four weeks without any police or social services intervention. All the children must be alive and in relatively good condition. The Winner gets to leave and go back to "work." •

Amethyst Briolette Necklace $3,000

Spring is in the air... What a beautiful breath of fresh air and color. Mish capitalizes on the pure brilliance of amethyst with this amazing briolette necklace. The necklace, with its delicate 18K yellow gold and amethyst jeweled clasp, is a subdued explosion of vivid purple hues. The piece rests beautifully just above the collarbone for a sophisticated, dramatic look. The length is sixteen and one half inches. Available at Mish New York, 22 East 72nd Street, Third Floor, New York City, 212-734-3500.

Rare and Unusual Trees $22,000 - $55,000

If you have a place to plant these rare and unusual trees, ranging in size from eighteen to thirty feet high, just do it! Marders Nursery has discovered and acquired a remarkable selection of eighty-plus year old, hand-sheared Beech trees and sheared Yews. They were discovered in Newport, Rhode Island on an estate and are the only ones of their type known anywhere in the country. There will be an unveiling at Marders on Sunday, April 1, to celebrate their rare discovery. Available at Marders Nursery, Snake Hollow Rd., Bridgehampton, 631-537-7023.

Painted Oak Cupboard $4800

What a beautiful space to store your precious dinnerware, silverware and more. This lovely American 19th century, Renaissance Revival cupboard is a beautiful addition to any home. The piece measures fifty-six inches high, thirty inches wide and thirteen and one half inches deep on the top with three shelves. The bottom measures twenty-one inches deep, thirty-six inches wide and thirty-eight inches high. Available at Antiques at Hayground, 1524 Montauk Highway, Watermill, 631-537-9594.

dants, Benedetto and Spicer, as all four of the men discussed the case. Plante said the men spoke about a local cabdriver who supplied them with drugs and they hoped the driver had been given enough money to keep quiet and leave the area. They talked about trying to get more money to him. Plante also claimed that Benedetto said Labrador "had the girl up at the house that night."

At the end of September, the attorney general of Tortola "on his own," as Ms. Labrador put it, charged George, Benedetto and Spicer with murder once again, as well as being accomplices.

It is not surprising that Plante's criminal past, as well as the fact that the charge for which he had been serving had been dismissed, lead many to doubt his testimony. Plante said that he violated his parole in Texas (where he was supposed to report to a parole officer regularly), not because of bad faith, but because he was interred in Tortola for another crime.

It did not help Plante's credibility that after being released from His Majesty's Prison in Tortola, he was arrested at the end of last year for passing a bad check (for $600) in the Virgin Islands.

There is also the "coincidence" that while serving time in a Hawaiian jail an inmate had "confessed" to Plante a murder. Ms. Labrador said that in the Hawaiian case the inmate whom Plante testified against wound up with a hung jury. In the retrial, in which Plante's testimony was not used (because he was then in another jail in another state) the inmate was convicted. "The consensus was that Plante's testimony muddied the trial, because his testimony was not in line with the facts."

Labrador added that Plante had already violated his parole before being jailed in Tortola. He had gotten married "maybe for the eighth time," said Ms. Labrador, "and he was honeymooning with his new wife in the summer of 1999. The the wife charged him with using her credit cards without her permission."

In response to questions raised by Labrador's lawyer about the prior charge, Plante said, "When the charge before the Magistrate Court was dismissed I did not hear much of what was going on because I have a hearing problem."

This of course immediately raised the issue of whether he could correctly hear what the various defendants had said. To this, Plante said that in the court he had been sitting about fifteen feet from the bar and that the conversation was soft spoken, while his conversations with the defendants were at about a distance of three feet, while other conversations he overheard were loud arguments.

Plante's testimony appears the only evidence against Labrador and the others—unless the prosecution garners anything from the new state-of-the art DNA tests that would be done in England and for which the trial had been postponed from last November to this April. McMillen's blood from the rocks of the shoreline where she was found, as well as clothing from the defendants, are among the items to be tested.

The trial of the four men will finally get underway on April 2, before a nine member jury. The court has ordered that there will be no further postponements. The trial is garnering international attention. There will be coverage by major networks and 48 Hours and Investigative Reports will be featuring segments on the case. • review: look homeward angel

By Helga Morpurgo

The Southampton Players, usually known for their well-staged musicals and comedies with large, well-choreographed casts, took on a new kind of challenge this season with the 1958 Pulitzer Prize winning play, Look Homeward, Angel, adapted for the stage by Ketti Frings from a novel by Thomas Wolfe.

"I wanted to do this play for fifteen years," Director Michael Disher told me during a brief interview after the play. "Being a boy from North Carolina this play really resonated with me. It's so rarely done—and I loved the book. I'm just very proud of young people tackling literature and developing a more versed feeling for well-written plays," he added. "They're not exposed to as much drama and literature as they should be."

Look Homeward, Angel is indeed a touching and beautifully written play. The most poetic moments occur at the end of each act—with a solitary character on stage doing something as simple as beautifully singing a little song or searching within him while talking with the ghost-like memory of a deceased brother.

Mr. Disher describes the drama as "a coming-of-age story" and said that was one of the reasons why he felt that Southampton College students would especially identify.

Yes, young Eugene Gant, played by Southampton College student Brian Donnelly, went through major experiences during the three acts of the play—such as the delicious and heart-wrenching twists and turns of first love. He even witnessed his mother wanting to sell his father's most treasured creation (a larger-than-life sculpted angel), as well pressing to sell his tombstone-cutting shop—a business that represented his life during their 31-year marriage.

"Business isn't going well," Eliza reasoned. "In this day and age people die too slowly."

Eugene also stood by helplessly watching his brother die and finally left home to create his own new world of experience with the money his mother gave after selling her land at a loss in order to send him to college.

If this is a play about a young man's coming of age it is also the story of a mother's courage as she gradually loses the children she has had to be strong for.

"I'm 57-years old," Eliza Gant argued as she pressed to sell her husband's stone-cutting business for $20,000. "I've borne nine children and I raised seven of them. We've been married 31 years and we must go on. We will go on. A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Eliza, played to perfection by seasoned actress Priscilla Sprague, had to steel herself against the humiliation of social embarrassment caused by her alcoholic husband, who was known to reel in without advance warning in a boisterous, drunken state. As a responsible mother and the manager of her own boarding house she was forced to maintain her dignity while guests checked-out in horror.

Yes, like so many stone-faced, inwardly desperate mothers, Eliza felt she had to control every member of the family for their own good – and yes, she had alienated her sons and husband with her responsible take-charge ways. Did she have any choice? As a respectable mother living in the genteel south a century ago, could she have done any more than carry the burden that had accumulated through the years of her marriage to a falling-down drunk?

Ben Gant, played with appropriate lack of control by Jeff Schaeffer, was a father that seemed distant and obscure. What may this character's private demons have been that he had chosen to drown them in drink? Why was the "angel" his greatest treasure? What other meaningful things had been taken away from him that rendered him more absent than present in his family's Olympics?

Yes, this sadly compassionate play is about a young man's coming of age. It is also about responsibility, making the best of a challenging situation, remaining solid when everything around is falling apart. It has so many levels and facets that each character could be analyzed in depth—including the character of Helen, played with clarity and intelligence by seasoned actress Kymme Napoli.

Helen mirrored her mother's sense of purpose as she maintained the boarding house in support of her mother's efforts to raise money for the family. No one had ever sold anything to raise money for her education. As the "responsible" daughter she had assumed the role of maintaining the boarding house for her mother. Was it because she was a girl that Helen's life was dedicated to helping her mother hold the family together? "A house divided against itself cannot stand," was the mantra she had heard since she was a little girl.

Ironically and tragically, all the efforts to hold the family together only resulted in separation. One by one, each son vanished – either by choice or by death.

The poetic beauty of this play lies as much in the subtext as in the lines. Look Homeward, Angel is a gem that not only college students can identify with, but a work of depth that any member of any family can find something of themselves in.

Veteran actors, Vay David, Jeff Schaeffer, Kymme Napoli, Priscilla Sprague and Scarlett Arbuckle rendered glowing performances. Priscilla Sprague should be particularly commended for her commanding stage presence and audibility. Her characterization was so anchored that it supported the performances of the novice actors who shared scenes with her.

Michael Disher's three-layered set, complete with a revolving upper level, was spectacular! Equal to any on Broadway. Costumes were remarkably beautiful and true to the period, while hairstyles (with the exception of two over-size wigs) did much to represent the era.

Additional performances will be taking place on March 29, 30 and 31 at 8 p.m. at the Avram Theatre, Southampton College. For reservations, please call: 631-287-8480. •

Southampton Players will be holding open auditions for "Cabaret" in April.

FIRST LOOK AT PARIS FALL FASHIONS

The Hamptons spring-summer season hasn't even begun yet but for you forward thinkers, I am giving you a sneak peek at what will be in style for "Fall 2001." As you know I go to Paris to cover the Pret-a-Porter Designer Collections for television stations throughout the country and for Dan's Papers. Many of the leading designers in Paris are either predicting a recession or responding to doom and gloom in the world markets and have added black to their collections. At YSL Tom Ford had a black carpet at the entrance, the answer to the red carpet, covering the cobblestone lined with hunky males wearing black vented jackets and carrying big umbrellas and attitude. Fashion shows ran late, some ending around midnight. There is a new age of young designers and some of the major names introduced their young talented assistants, so watch for new names emerging over the next year or so. Forward thinking John Galliano launched some new trends including: dress up for day and dress down for evening; pirates, ravers symbolizing the daring side of life. Yet Galliano and others were continuing to focus on clothing that draws attention but work in the real world. Tom Ford has his gypsies migrating into urban life with panache. And a hot new name is young designer Olivier Theyskens, a name hard to spell but will be easy to remember. His designs were innovative and engineered. You might need some help putting on a few of these outfits...wonder if they come with an intsruction manual? Lagerfeld always re-inventing himself added some wild and wooly ideas to his season including sweaters with pop-art style images of Coco Chanel. Check out those boots in the pictures, as they are hot for the fall.

PARRISH ART MUSEUM'S "SPRING FLING" UNDER THE BIG TOP

Photography
Ginger Proper

Saturday night the Parrish Art Museum in Southampton held its Annual "Spring Fling" event. 2001 was the first time this successful event was held under a giant heated tent on the grounds of the Museum, due to the over whelming response and attendance. The event "kicked-off" the opening of the 2001 season.

review: the lonesome west

By Helga Morpurgo

Once in a rare while Stephen Talkhouse owner, Peter Honerkamp opens his doors to a theatrical production, and what could be more fitting than bringing an Irish comedy to a legendary pub just before and after Montauk's renowned Saint Patricks's parade. Stephen Talkhouse, on Main Street, Amagansett has been known for decades for its informal atmosphere and the many blues and rock-and-roll performers it has housed. Whenever it widened its doors to a theatrical experience it never failed to be a special event.

Quack Theatrics' outstanding production of The Lonesome West, a wickedly absurd black comedy by Tony award-winning Irish playwright, Martin McDonagh, was received by an enthusiastic packed-house audience that savored every moment of this deliciously irreverent Irish play about fatherly murder, brotherly shenanigans, and the suicide of a heaven-questioning priest.

Picture two brothers and a newly appointed Catholic priest imbibing a pint of beer in a kitchen that doubles as a living room after a wake. Eavesdrop while they talk about murder, suicide and ecclesiastical failure—all three of them heavily indulging in the four-letter word. A beautiful but bawdy young lass joins them—adding her own four letter word to the conversation. A fight breaks out between the two verbally battling brothers whose father one of them had just murdered. No wonder the new arrival to the pulpit has some serious frustrations.

"This town will drive a man to drink," philosophizes the priest. "You must be missing your father," he adds. "Two slaughterings and a suicide and I can't even get one confession. I'm a terrible priest, that I am."

"You have doubts about Catholicism. Other than that you're a fine priest," the sharper of the two brothers replies.

Martin McDonagh is only twenty-something and he is already a celebrated playwright. The Lonesome West is the third of a trilogy—classically categorized as a satire in the Greek tradition of offering a bawdy, irreverent topping to an evening of heavy tragedy—perhaps to give the audience a degree of levity before they bring a cloud of doom back to their homes. After all, humor is the most effective teaching device, as it seems to break down all resistance.

William Burford, Artistic Director of Quack Theatrics, gave the company birth in the fall of 2000. He trained as a director and is currently serving as an acting teacher at the Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor.

Playing the role of the unlikely priest, Stephen Hamilton, who founded the Bay Street Theater in tandem with his wife, Emma Walton, doubled as the director of this offering. This production is his first undertaking as director—one that he gives generous credit to Bill Burford for as his coach.

The intimate stage allowed for a feeling of interplay with the audience, as everyone in the house seemed to be drinking a pint of beer or something while the story unfolded—while saving the most human moments for last.

Yes, indeed. The unguarded, human moments are few and late in coming—characteristic of the nature of the play and its despondent characters. Everyone is lonely—unable to connect except through childish pranks and vicious taunting.

The cast is an outstanding quartet of professional actors who couldn't do wrong by any script. Tom Gustin as Coleman Connor, the cruel, murdering brother, is a virtuoso on the stage—as is John Beuscher as his childish, reactive brother.

Jennifer Laks is beautiful and touching as Girleen Kelleher, the young woman who just wants to be acknowledged.

Stephen Hamilton, as the priest, the evening's host and the production's director, wore each hat with remarkable ease and professionalism. As the priest expressing his woes in a heavy Irish brogue his performance was truly amazing. It was hard to realize that Mr. Hamilton wasn't a priest but really an actor when he mingled with the audience following the show.

Gary Hygom's set showed more than a touch of genius—with a shotgun, ceramic saints, a stove and a crucifix all lined up one under the other. Props and furniture were well coordinated, appropriately characteristic of the people and place, and the lighting moved the action form scene to scene without being noticed.

Additional performances will be talking place on March 28, 29, 30 and 31 at the Stephen Talkhouse in Amagansett. For reservations call: (516) 443-9594. ●

Junk or Jewel? Antique Appraisal Day

The North Fork Antiques Dealers and the North Fork Promotion Council hosted the North Fork Antique Appraisal Day on Saturday, March 17. Appraisers from the local area lined up to give their opinions on hundreds of interesting pieces."We aim to give honest pricing, without inflated prices like you may find on TV," reported North Fork Antique Dealers' Association President Joel Kobrin of Peddler's Rest Antiques. "We like to give a more realistic appraisal." The public was also requested to bring in any interesting stories on how they found their objects. One gentleman brought in a bronze sculpture of Napoleon (circa 1885). "It was a wedding present from my Mother-in-law in 1951. "She bought it because the sculpture looked just like me." Sure enough, it still does! The piece was appraised between $1,500-$1,800 by Gene Mott from Antiques and Old Lace, Joel Kobrin and Jan Davis. Another woman brought in a beautiful hand-made crib, circa 1800s, possibly earlier. "I was given this by my aunt and she told me her great grandmother laid in it when she was a baby. We have kept it through the generations." She then produced a genealogy chart showing everyone that used the crib. It originally came over from Fulda, Germany in 1930. The crib had beautiful inlaid wood designs all over the sides. It was appraised at $600 with genealogy by Richard Sahm of Willow Hill Antiques. Art pieces brought in some interesting stories. One gentleman walked in with two examples of "Tramp Art." They were

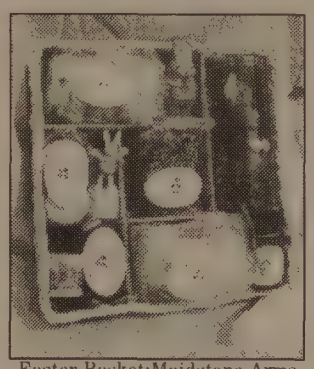
Cottages to Castles Hamptons Style

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Well with April on our doorstep, we can really start thinking spring, Passover and Easter. Isn't that devine. Let's do some spring and holiday shopping!

Look for the grand opening on March 31 of eden rocks (yes, all lower case letters) on Jobs Lane in Southampton. You will find her original creations that were only available by appointment. Her vintage crystal, sterling silver and semi-precious designs for over ten years are now available seven days a week at this shop. Complementing her unique jewelry are gorgeous accessories like Swarovski crystal belts, boas, bags, hand-beaded shawls, carves and much more. If you are one of the uninitiated, step into her funky boutique and see what all the fuss is about. She has something for women of all ages including a new teen section that is brimming with the latest "must haves" like CD cases and feather jewelry. Call for information and remember you heard it here first.



Easter Basket:Maidstone Arms

Also on Jobs Lane at Norahs there is a big liquidation sale going on right now. Norahs will be moving soon to another location, still in negotiations. All clothing and accessories are slashed and are 60% and more off regular prices. Get going and fill your closets without shrinking your pocketbook.

Passing quickly through Water Mill, Aesthetics Home Furnishing and Antiques caught my eye. They are doing some spring-cleaning and are making room for new merchandise arriving soon. Because it costs more to store than to sell it out, you get to save 20% to 50% off and if your nice, or you tell him that Dan or I sent you, says Rich the owner, he'll even do better than that. Sound's like Let's Make A Deal with Monte Hall to me!

Are you looking for that something special for Easter? Look no further because The Maidstone Arms on Main Street in East Hampton is offering special homemade Easter baskets that can be shipped anywhere in the United States. The basket is created from The Maidstone Arms' very own product line, Maidscones (and we all know what they are). Maidscones pastry chefs create delectable goodies for these unique Easter baskets that include chocolate, butter crunch, shortbread cookies, solid milk chocolate bunny, assorted fruit scones, homemade jam, a toy, a puppet bunny and a chick sound box. All that in one basket. The cost? Only $40 plus shipping and can be shipped anywhere in the USA. Call to place an order 631-324-5006.

Off the Hampton beaten path, in New York City, Vera Wang has marked down her bridal and ready-to-wear gowns of satin, tulle organza and silk 50% to 75%. You will find all this on Saturday, March 31, 9-5 at the Hotel Pennsylvania at 401 Seventh Avenue (eighteenth floor) or call for information 212-575-6400.

And...White + Warren, 80 W. 40th Street (third floor) on Friday, March 30, 9-4 p.m., you can scoop up real bargains such as classic cashmere sweaters priced from $20 to $100 and plain T-shirts for only $15 each.

Making my plans for Easter, my entire family will be here so I will have to get ready way in advance. It's time to contact TravelBabies.com (631-666-3484) for renting out some baby equipment for my little grandchildren that will be visiting. At TravelBabies.com you can rent cribs, strollers, high chairs, car seats, and much more. They deliver and pick up to boot!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Spring and Holiday Shopping!

made to resemble a "Shadow Box." These particular pieces were made from a shipwreck off Rocky Point, East Marion. They were made by a gentleman (possibly George Clark) who was in the Coast Guard at that time. The small piece was worth approximately $225 and the large piece between $500 and $1,000. The gentleman then reported that he had a whole attic full of these pieces. Needless to say he walked out a happy customer!

From the trenches of World War I came an interesting artillery shell that had been decorated. Several faces were etched into it along with the date of 1919 and a woman's name "Bertha." It was reported that this piece of "Trench Art" was done while a soldier was waiting to return home to America after the end of the war. Jan Davis of Jan Davis Antiques appraised the piece at $150.

Many pieces of jewelry were brought in. Joan Pressler from Past Times Antiques was busy looping and looking. One chain of pearls, valued at $500, had a great story that went along with them. They were given to the owner's Mom in 1930 in a ceremony from the Japanese Consul in recognition of her saving the prince (later emperor Hiroshita) from drowning in the Imperial Palace's swimming pool a year earlier.

Best story and antique of the day went to a young man from Greenport who brought in a carved wooden "Whistling Hobo." The mechanical piece resembled those familiar "carved Pirates" with the exception that its head bobs and it has a musical mechanism in the back. The Antique Dealers were very impressed by the piece. They conferred and said it would be worth at least $1,500. The young man was very impressed for he and his girlfriend found it on a trip back from Vermont. "We took a wrong turn on the way home and happened into a small yard sale. We picked it up for $20." Appraised by Gene Mott from Antiques and Old Lace. North Fork Antique Dealers are planning for an appraisal day during the summer with the Mattituck Historical Society. They are also planning on doing this event again next year.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE JEFFERSON SUITES AT THE PARRISH

"Content equals form" is an essential principle signifiying how theme and technique merge to create a valuable aesthetic entity. A variation on this adage is illustrated by Carrie Mae Weems' "The Jefferson Suites," an installation at the Parrish Art Museum: Intention equals presentation.

Ms. Weems' digitally-produced imagery on eighteen banners is meant to be upfront and personal. In a word, confrontational. It's a piece which fosters interaction between the art and the viewer. In another word, it's an interactive example that doesn't involve technology, but rather honest-to-goodness contact between real people and real material.

As spectators wander among the transparent banners hung from the ceiling, often inadvertently touching them, something happens. The banners sway in the wind taking on a personality of their own. The dynamics reach us, both literally and figuratively. Yet something else is happening simultaneously. For such substantial and serious imagery, the banners' material is light and transient. If content were to equal form in this case, they would be made of burlap connoting weight and duration.

The banner images chronicle the history of DNA and are, in fact, significant and lasting. Some are authentic, like photographs of Charles Darwin and Timothy Wilson Spencer, the first person (a black man) whose execution was based solely on DNA. Two images are manufactured in tableau form: Thomas Jefferson in the foreground, a defused Sally Hemings in the background; a more modern version with a man on a cell phone in the foreground facing a semi-clad woman in the background. Both females have their backs to the male protagonists. While the shots' designs seem a bit obvious, these two photographs alone signify the durable exploitation of woman by men.

"The Jefferson Suites"

As viewers looking at the installation, we are engaged by and interact with the setting and particularly the latter two theatrical images, although the photographs' male-female figures are not engaged whatsoever – the point Ms. Weems is making. Clearly, the women are objects of the "male gaze," as they are also objects of our own voyeuristic gaze as well.

Curiously, this critic first became aware of Ms. Weems through her photographs depicting black family life, especially as family members interacted around the kitchen table. Here, the figures were most certainly engaged, even if some were alienated from each other. As spectators, we were also profoundly moved.

"The Jefferson Suites" and "Faces of Freedom Summer," photographs by Herbert Randall, will be on view at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum until May 13, 2001.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CHARLES WALLER

Some animals hibernate in the winter. So do some artists for that matter, but not East Hampton resident, Charles Waller. No matter what the weather or circumstances, chances are Mr. Waller will be rumaging through anything from junk to antiques with his companion, Audrey, and his parrot, Tatu, in tow.

Doing what, may we dare ask? Looking for found objects and references, of course, anything that Mr. Waller can collect and evenually use for his art work. (This week's cover, "Enigma," features an antique lock which he found.)

And where does Mr. Waller look for his objects? Lots of places, but as he's fond of saying, "I'll take a flea market any time."

Mr. Waller is simply obsessed with flea markets – from London's Portebello Market where he practically grew up, living nearby as he did, to the word's largest flea market, Brimfield, in Massachusetts where he camps out for as much as three days.

"I used to collect etchings and pieces of armor at Portebello Road," he explains. "I also went there to buy old military uniforms during the hippy era. My parents wouldn't let me grow my hair long so I wore this groovy clothing. I also remember working for a man who looked for old bottles in dumps. He once found a jar that was worth $18,000; can you imagine that?"

When Mr. Waller and his parents moved to the United States (actually he was born in California and got to England via South America), he entered the Rhode Island School of Art and Design. It was while working at the Boston Globe and attending school that Mr. Waller found another niche. "I was doing illustrations for the newspaper, and the New York Times asked me to do some drawings for them. The Globe fired me, although they tried to hire me back."

Working for The Times proved beneficial for Mr. Waller. It was there that he started doing political illustrations (although he did pieces for other Times' columns as well). "Twenty years ago, a group of us started a company called INX," he explains. " We syndicated our drawings around the world, the first group to get syndicated for works without words. We just finished a show of our work at St. John's University, in fact, in a new art wing that was a gift from the Republic of China."

While Mr. Waller usually does fine art pieces rather than illustrations these days, there remains a refreshing directness which connects his two kinds of media, where specific times and periods are evoked in arresting ways.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Waller's work can be seen at East Hampton's Morgan Rank Gallery.

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

The Mexican

A SOPRANO IN THE MARIACHI TRIO

The hot blood and guts, sauteed so delectably in the expensive, silver chafing dish by HANNIBAL has finally cooled down to left-over, 4th Place Box Office status. It was assumed that the barbequed-to-a-crisp, 15 MINUTES , starring Bobby De Niro would sizzle up to 1st Place. However, OUCH! . . . they got burned by a couple of hot tamales in THE MEXICAN. Surprisingly, since its level of Jalapeno pepperiness is rather mild. But, the corn in those husky, tamale wraps are the highly seasoned Box Office draws Julia Roberts and Brad Pitt and, add to that the pop-culture-phenomenal, Tony Soprano's man behind the mug, James Gondolfini. For those few who may be encased in a tree trunk in a heavily wooded section of the Springs, Tony Soprano is a humble "family" man/mobster who, as portrayed by Mr. Gondolfini, has bullied the HBO film TV Series, The Sopranos, into a rage of world-wide fascination. It appears, no one can refuse that offering . . . nor, Gondolfini's complex shyness. . .and it may be that his strong-arm muscle was responsible for THE MEXICAN elbowing its way to the top with its kindred story of criminals and their warm, pliant underbellies or, in this movie . . . tummies.

HEY, ANALYZE HIM

With the same gentle, hit man charm, Gondolfini, hijacks the movie from its stars, with Tony Soprano's hot-wired sensitivity. It's not that Julia's firm, hot lips have cooled or, Brad Pitt's rigid abs are not displayed . . . it's a matter of roles. This current road show comedy screwballs its way, speeding, through social criticism, odd fantasies, twisty plot skidding, some weird violence and some sex . . . NOT, in this case, necessarily with the two super-duper-sex-pots. Julia is too busy bashing Brad with psycho-jargon babbling as he tosses and turns in adolescent fits of protest. Julia has every right to complain. As a Freudian based shrew she's learned to expect more. Her stream-of-consciousness therapy-tirades are meant to improve Brad's dumb, luckless, fumbled meandering in the underworld.

GROUP THERAPY WITH A GUN

Pity poor Pitt, a car accident seals his ties to the mob bosses. They give him one last chance . . . he's to go to Mexico and drag back one of the boss's no-good grandsons and THE MEXICAN. The Mexican is not one of those swarthy unfortunates in the sun-fried, whole enchilada movie, TRAFFIC. It is an antique gun with a flash-back mystique and a bad habit of mis-firing. He accepts his near-impossible mission, Julia is as mad as an over-sized Chihuahua . . . . she splits to Las Vegas and the mobsters send out hit men after her . . . as insurance against any Julia and Brad spanky-hanky-panky. They want that pistola! Doesn't anyone know the old gun has a curse on it?

TONY SOPRANO SINGS GAILY

Open wide the velvet curtains. Enter, sideways, the wide, wide bulk of the Gondolf', in person.. His heavy eyes droop with introspection and block what looks like a tear. He's the mob guy sent to put the snatch on Julia. She's reading "Men Who Can't Love" at the time. Julia may be the kidnap victim but, with her pathological endearment to psychology, it doesn't take her long to analyze Leroy (yes, that's Gondo's character) as a homosexual. Well, it was pretty evident when she noticed him making eyes at a young man in a diner. Soon, she and Leroy are closer than pre-teens at a sleep-over. After all, they have so much in common. How can Leroy (Gondolf') explain his line of work to the new feller? How can Julia find true, steady, reliable love? The odd couple are soon an intimate therapy group, all by themselves.

Don't think Julia lets you off lightly in THE MEXICAN. Looking as plain as Jane (Max Factor took a walk) and clothing also uninspired (Donna Karan has averted her eyes) Miss Roberts can twist-wheedle you with her bright light ability. She, with her co-stars, hoists the bee-jeepers out of this production that can't get itself off of the soft turf that mushes-up a perfectly-be-ootiful romance . . . between Julia and the Golfo'. Caramba ! Hang in there . . . there's the myth of the gun. There's Brad's Spanish, "need a truck-o to the next town-o." There are the mob bosses, Bob Balaban and J.K. Simmons. And, how about Gondolfo's slick beard, a Van Dyke . . . the painter, not Dick. It doesn't hide his usual, unusual performance. Adios.

Peter Pan Flies Into The Bay Street Theatre

Peter Pan, Wendy, Michael, John, Captain Hook, Tiger Lily and the Lost Boys will be flying in from Neverland Land when Stages presents its production of the musical Peter Pan at the Bay Street Theatre.

Performances will be held Friday, March 30, at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, March 31, 2 p.m. and Sunday, April 1, 2 p.m. The cast of thirty-five young actors, directed by Helene Leonard, is headed by Erin Harris as Peter Pan and Craig Schenck as Captain Hook, with Caitlyn Amanda as Wendy. Musical accompaniment will be provided by local professionals Ellen Johansson and James Benard, with set design by Robin Richards and Karen Harris, and costumes by Valerie Bell. Flying will be provided by ZFX Flying Illusions, who provided the flying for Cathy Rigby's production. All of this adds up to wonderful family entertainment, for all those who haven't or will never grow up!

So think lovely thoughts and call the Bay Street Theatre box office at 725-9500 for tickets, $15 for adults and $12 for children twelve and under, or call Stages at 329-1420 for further information. –Nancy Owens

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

When Brendan Met Trudy (-)

This film is a bomb. I generally love Irish films. Why? I love the stories, the wit, the locations, the acting and the language. But this does not apply to this film. In fact, I still have no idea what this film is all about.

It occasionally seemed like the director was trying to make an Irish version of Fellini's films, and even included some surrealistic scenes. But it just did not work.

Out of all of the usually fine components found in most Irish films, only one component is worthy of praise in this film – the performances of the two principals. The story is about Brendan (Peter McDonald), who is a young Irish school teacher and looks like a young Jeremy Irons, and just as thin. Brendan is in his 30s and has an empty social life. His life is devoid of pleasure expect for choir practice, which he enjoys immensely.

One day Brendan goes to a pub where he meets Trudy (Flora Montgomery) who is a free spirit. Indeed she is more than that, she is a thief, who enjoys stealing because of the danger involved.

Brendan becomes infatuated with her and joins her in committing some burglaries. There are some sex scenes involving the two, but these scenes are not very interesting and almost asexual in feeling.

Another Fellini aspect of this film is the fact that every now and then there are clips from other movies. For example, there is a clip from Sunset Boulevard, when William Holden is found dead in the pool. There are also clips from The African Queen, The Quiet Man and other films. These clips are followed by scenes wherein Brendan emulates some of the actors in the earlier films, particularly John Wayne and his cowboy walk.

The failure of this is film is unexpected because the screen play was written by Roddy Doyle. He wrote The Commitments and The Snapper, which are both first rate Irish comedies.

This film was praised by Roger Ebert, and James Berardelli, who wrote that it is "guaranteed to delight movie-goers." Not this movie-goer...

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

The Rhythm Kings rocked at The Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday. They covered music from Bob Marley to The Rolling Stones. Great turn out, lots of dancing. Hopefully they'll be back soon. I heard that Funktion is playing there in a couple of weeks and that they've signed a major contract. Rumor has it that they are recording at the same place Tupak was shot at, be careful boys, and congrats!

silvia lehrer's cooking column

I'm not about to give up meat, yet I'm thinking mushrooms, more and more. In light of all the media attention to the ugly mad cow disease abroad, and lapses and misconduct among meat inspectors in handling safety meat regulations here in New York and New Jersey – it is food for thought.

The great variety of mushrooms with their earthy flavors and unusual textures from robust, steaklike portobello (really overgrown creminis), the delicate and whimsically shaped oyster mushrooms, the exotic chanterelles, the domestic whites and the extremely flavorful and popular shiitakes, are all delicious alternatives to meat.

The other night I sautéed slices of a portobello mushroom to serve as a side vegetable. They cooked slowly in olive oil and garlic rendering them a sweet and toothsome concoction. Other times I have made a broth of mushroom stems with a bit of chopped shallot, black peppercorns and a bay leaf to braise the sliced caps until tender and juicy. I served them with a salad of arugula and shaved Parmesan. It makes a wonderfully satisfying first course. Combine wild mushrooms, such as shiitake or portobello with dried porcini for a rich and savory risotto and eat it as a separate course, Italian style.

Mushrooms may not make the meal, but it is wise to explore the variety of textures they offer along with their depth of flavor. Mushrooms are very nutritious and are an excellent source of fiber and the B vitamin niacin. Shiitake mushrooms have been known to dramatically lower cholesterol.

PS, if you are tempted to forage for wild mushrooms go out with an expert, unless you want to play Russian roulette.

BRAISED PORTOBELLO AND ARUGULA SALAD

Simmer sliced portobello mushrooms in mushroom broth to render them tender and juicy then serve with a salad of arugula and shaved Parmesan. The mushrooms are deliciously filling without being fattening.
Serves 4-6

For the mushroom broth
Stems from 2-3 pounds of mushrooms (2 large portobello)
1 shallot, coarsely chopped
4 black peppercorns
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf

For the Salad
2 large portobello mushrooms, peeled and stemmed
1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 large clove garlic, peeled and left whole
3 teaspoons lemon juice
2 bunches arugula, washed and spin-dried
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
Wedge of parmesan for shaving

1. Trim and discard mushroom ends that have any dirt clinging to them. Cut into pieces and place in saucepan with remaining broth ingredients. Cover with 6 cups cold water; place over low heat and simmer for about 1 to 1 1/4 hours until reduced by half. Allow to cool for about 15 minutes then strain and cool. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated.

2. Wipe portobello clean with a damp paper towel under the gills. Cut into 1/2 inch slices. Heat a heavy-gauge nonstick skillet or a well-seasoned cast-iron skillet over medium heat; when pan is hot add 2 tablespoons olive oil and peeled garlic clove. When clove is golden brown remove and discard. Put in the mushroom slices in one layer and season to taste with salt and pepper. Saute until golden on both sides, about 2 minutes. Add the mushroom broth. With cover ajar, cook mushrooms over medium heat until tender, about 5-7 minutes and most of the liquid is evaporated. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon lemon juice.

3. Toss arugula leaves with remaining lemon juice to taste and remaining olive oil. Adding more lemon juice and oil as necessary if using two bunches. Divide the greens equally on 4-6 salad plates. Divide the braised mushrooms and serve alongside the greens. Shave the wedge of Parmesan over the greens and mushrooms and serve at once.

STUFFED PORTOBELLO MUSHROOMS

These saucer-sized mushrooms are stuffed with a savory duxelle and broccoli mixture then coated with a crusty crumb topping. The white button and shiitake mushrooms may be carefully chopped in a food processor.
Serves 6

6 portobello mushrooms, about 3 inches in diameter
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil or unsalted butter
3 tablespoons shallots, finely chopped
1/3 pound white button mushrooms, trimmed and finely chopped
1/3 pound shiitake mushrooms, trimmed and finely chopped

2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cooked broccoli florets, coarsely chopped
1/3 - 1/2 cup chicken stock
Freshly ground pepper
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1-2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons unseasoned bread crumbs
2 tablespoons flat-leaf Italian parsley

1. Stem and peel the portobellos and wipe clean with dampened paper towels. Brush the caps with oil and sprinkle with salt.

2. Heat the butter or oil in a large skillet and saute the shallots for a minute or two until translucent, be careful not to brown. Add the chopped mushrooms and saute until all their moisture evaporates. Sprinkle flour over the mushrooms and saute, stirring for about 2 minutes. Add the stock and stir until the mixture thickens. Stir in the chopped broccoli. Season with salt, pepper, cayenne and lemon juice, mix and taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Allow mixture to cool. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated in a suitable container.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees and adjust rack to upper third of oven.

3. Divide the mixture among the caps, coat with bread crumbs then press down to firmly to make an even layer in each. Drizzle over a little olive oil, if desired, and sprinkle with parsley. Roast for about 10 minutes until tender and juicy. Serve at once.

RISOTTO WITH DRIED PORCINI AND HERBS

A specialty of northern Italy, risotto is known for the creamy texture that the rice develops as it slowly cooks absorbing liquid. To make a good risotto use imported short-grained rice from Italy such as carnoroli or arborio.
Serves 6-8 as a first course

3/4 ounce dried porcini mushrooms
1/4 - 1/3 pound shitake mushrooms, trimmed, rinsed and thinly sliced
1 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium red onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
2 cups imported rice from Italy
1/3 cup dry white wine
5 1/2-6 cups chicken stock, heated to simmering
1/2 cup chopped fresh herb mix (basil, chives and parsley)
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/3 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Soak dry mushrooms in lukewarm water for 30 minutes before you start to cook. Filter the liquid carefully when the mushrooms are reconstituted. Continue to wash and soak the mushrooms, changing water frequently until mushrooms are soft and dirt-free. Cut into thin strips and set aside.

2. Heat 1 tablespoon butter in a large, flameproof casserole over medium heat. Saute prepared shitake mushrooms for several minutes until tender. Remove to a side dish when done. Add the oil and cook onion and garlic for several minutes until tender but not brown. Stir in rice and cook about 1 minute. Add wine and bring to a boil, stirring until most of the wine is evaporated.

3. Add 1/2 cup simmering broth and cook, stirring, at a gently simmer. When most of the liquid is absorbed, add another half cup of the broth. Repeat until rice is half cooked, about 12 - 15 minutes and add the drained mushrooms and, still stirring constantly, continue adding broth, 1/2 cup at a time until rice is tender, about 20-22 minutes.

4. Taste the rice for doneness. It should be creamy yet with a bite. Add the herbs and cheese and stir to mix. Taste for salt and pepper and adjust if necessary. Remove from heat and serve immediately.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Tsunami
44 Three Mile Harbor Road, East Hampton
329-6000

First impressions count for a lot in most everything that we do. The first impressions of Tsunami are of delight and warmth – delight at the quietly elegant decor with its oriental overtones and the warmth of greeting from whoever of the staff is the first to meet you. Mellow candle light and soft lamps plus a welcoming fire on a chilly March evening spoke of a place to relax and enjoy whatever the evening may offer. Tables are well spaced so that you are a part of the overall dining experience but not subject to hearing the conversation from the nearest tables. Background music is charming and very much in keeping with this general air of warm exotic intimacy.

'Fusion' is a trendy word used too often in culinary circles and which at worst can mean a mishmash of dishes from different parts of the world. The dictionary definition of fusion is 'to blend different things into one' and this blending into one is the true test. Tsunami was started almost three years ago by Frank Cilione, who after starting Club NV in the SoHo district of New York City, decided to leave his senior position with a major bank and to open a restaurant which would reflect both his taste in design and decor and also in high quality Asian-Fusion cuisine. Now, as NV celebrates it's fifth birthday, Frank together with his partner Shamin Abas, is preparing for the opening of a large new Tsunami restaurant in West Palm Beach.

Shamin was our host for the evening and as she talked with us it was obvious that running the restaurant is something which, despite the complexity and the problems which go with the restaurant business, she totally relishes. Tsunami is open year round and she told us that they have many customers who are regulars throughout the year. Naturally, in the summer the pace heats up and it is quite usual for them to serve 300 diners on a Saturday night. To add to the challenges, they also open the very popular NV night club adjacent to the restaurant. NV opens from Thursday to Sunday and diners are welcome to visit the club after dinner and dance away some of the calories they have enjoyed acquiring.

While studying the menu, we crunched on some crispy fried wontons with a delicious dipping sauce which we discovered comprised a medley of figs, plums, mango, oranges and chile pepper.

Our taste buds were first tempted by the watercress and endive salad served with candied walnuts and Roquefort cheese and with a rice wine dressing. The serving was beautifully arranged and pleased the eye. The steamed vegetable dumplings were good if not exceptional but the crisp spring roll with a succulent filling of ham, cheese and broccoli rabe and an excellent dipping sauce outclassed any spring roll we had previously eaten. Tsunami is renowned for the quality of their sushi and Shamin explained that they offer a much wider selection during the season. The spicy tuna roll with an accompanying really hot chile aioli sauce amply explained why their sushi is so much in demand. Steamed mussels are a staple on many restaurant menus in our area, but Tsunami has raised them to a new level of desirability. The steaming pot held plump mussels simmering in a broth of coconut milk ginger, lime juice and cilantro. The flavors filled our mouths but did not overwhelm the natural flavor of the mussels. This is normally served with a roasted Nan bread but in the interests of tasting as many dishes as possible we resisted, with great difficulty, our desires to sop up this delectable broth to the last drop.

Tsunami's special rice dish blends shrimp, scallops, chicken beef, chili oil and scallions to produce a superb dish which encapsulates really everything that they set out to achieve. Another favorite dish of many is the Chilean sea bass which Tsunami offers marinated in miso and sake cooked to perfection and served with a Chinese long bean salad. The other main courses ranged from duck to tuna and chicken and sounded equally exciting but, regrettably, there is a limit to how much can be tasted, even when working on tasting portions. We also had to leave room for at least one dessert and we both agreed that this had to be the delectable sounding coconut creme brulee served with candied ginger and berries. We are both lovers of the classic creme brulee but by now we were convinced that this variation of a classic dish, if it were on the menu here, then it was bound to be good. And were we right! This comprised the creaminess of creme brulee and a topping of the correct degree of crispness and caramelization with the delicate flavor of coconut and the result really encapsulated just how the word fusion should be applied to cooking.

As we finished our evening with some good strong coffees, I asked Shamin about their chef and she told us that this season they have a new chef de cuisine in Gretchen Menser who has been with them for a while as sous chef and who has now taken over the top job. It is nice to hear of a local chef, especially a woman, getting the opportunity to do this and based on our experience, all the regular and new customers at Tsunami are really going to enjoy her cooking.

If the word 'flavor' has been extensively used this is quite deliberate because when you dine at Tsunami you will experience flavor to the full. This does not mean that you will be overwhelmed because the skill that has gone into the choice of the menu and the cooking produces wonderful food which will leave your taste buds pleasantly glowing. Nothing is overly spicy or hot and the very knowledgeable and helpful waitstaff will guide you through the menu to ensure that your likes are fulfilled.

Tsunami has a realistically priced wine list and Shamin explained that this year they will be expanding the range of Long Island wines they offer. They also offer several exotic special mixed drinks.

Appetizers range from $7 to $12. Main courses from $17 to $28. Desserts $6 to $10. They also offer a three course prix fixe at $21.95.

This is one of the most interesting and exciting restaurants you will find. Come here for the warmth of the welcome, the friendliness of the service, the charm of the surroundings and exceptionally well-cooked and presented food which will leave your taste buds tingling and will satisfy the most jaded of palates. This is a happy place to visit and eat – what more could you ask for?

Form and Preparation For Maximum Athletic Performance

Endurance sports require proper technique in order to achieve maximum output, because without right form, over extended intervals, joints and ligaments become sore and the mind begins to lose interest in future possibilities of the activity. Before you apply yourself in a sport, research workout time periods, types of workouts, and exercises to enhance way of body movement. Also, you will need to consider getting hands on tips either from a friend or professional before you get really serious. If you can workout with an experienced group or club.

Most of us have a natural stride we have learned since childhood but we do not know how to tap it, and what a lot of people do when they are starting out or coming back into running is overwork their legs. Do a light jog for about 50 meters or so, noticing if you are landing on your heel, center foot, or toes. Make sure you are landing either on your heel or toes, but not your arch. I earned the nickname "flat foot" in high school track because I landed on the center of my foot. This way of running could not have been healthy for my already problematic knee ligaments which I managed to stretch and hurt more than a few times doing contact sports.

The Japanese woman who won the last Olympic marathon, for example, ran on her toes. Usually it is ultra-light swift runners who can stay on their toes. Lissa, who works for Gubbins Running Ahead shoe store and does some distance running now and then, said that usually toe running is for sprints. Barbara Gubbins, a running regular out here and owner of Gubbins, talks about running form: "You can't really think about it. Everybody has a running form that is natural to them. I wouldn't give it any thought. Just put one foot in front of the other and go forward. Normal gait would be a heel to toe but some people, especially sprinters, run on their toes.

I run on my toes to accelerate, go up hills, go down hills, and than on the flats, or on straight open spaces really open up my stride, landing on the heels about two-thirds of the time. My first season on the Stony Brook Cross-Country team I knew my limits from past experience rowing crew, so I backed off from the running team mid-season in early November and spent time while my teammates were running, on my bike. Leg movement is certainly different on the bike but it is in general more gentle on the knee and ligaments. Some people get shin splints, a sharp pain in the shins from landing and although I have never experienced this I think that cross-training in different sports can only help an injury; doing each different sport gives the other parts of the body time to heal.

If you are starting out or starting out again do a mile every other day for your first two weeks and add a half mile the following two weeks, and a whole mile the third two weeks. Doing three miles every other day consider working out with the East End Runners's Club which meets once a week, weather allowing, and is partly based out of Gubbins, Running Ahead. If your knees, shins, or hips are still bothering you try running on the beach with or without shoes but for shorter distances, because although the sand provides more cushion it also causes more resistance. Think about all the wear and tear the beach causes for four-wheel-drives vehicles.

It is difficult, unless you are a serous long-distance swimmer, to hurt your shoulder's rotor cuff, so if you are a beginner it is more important at this point to really focus on way of stroke and kick to propel your body smoothly through the water. Once proper flow is achieved and you are swimming long distances, then think about honing in on the little errors in your

About Face: False Eyelashes

False Eyelashes are becoming popular once again. A biggie in the sixties they sort of went by the wayside for all this time. Well, they are back and not a moment too soon. Many women are beginning to have thinning of their lashes and this can be the perfect solution for them. There are a couple on the market, full ones that can add density to the eye, the kind with the strip and individual ones, which are added one by one, which are the best for filling in a sparse area. When choosing a color, try to get a shade other than black. A dark brown is perfect for most, and a dark blonde for fair tones. To apply, have your eyes prepared as usual with your foundation, powder and color already applied. Run a line of color, say a mahogany or brown across the lid of your eye with a pencil and smudge it to give it a smoky appearance. This will camouflage the band on the strip of lashes. Run a bead of adhesive across the base of the artificial lashes and press as close as possible to the lash base as possible. Lightly press this down, curl your lashes...don't forget to heat your curler with a little warm air from your blower, and apply mascara...blending in the natural with the ones you just applied. The individual is a little trickier, you need a steady hand but the results are so life like. You can control where you need your eyes opened the most. Prepare your eyes, same as above, put a dab of adhesive on the tip of the eyelash and a tiny bit up the hair and lay it on top of your own lash. Then push slightly to the side. The sticky adhesive will allow the last to lay almost next to a natural or artificial one. Always, for both applications of lashes, allow the adhesive to dry for a second, let it get a little tacky first. Same as before, curl your lashes and apply your mascara. If you feel they are a little too long, you can trim carefully with a manicure scissors. These are really to be used on occasion and not on a daily basis. Constant use of the adhesive can irritate the eye. But for a glam look now and then, it is perfect! Have fun!

swimming, thereby preventing any injury. Most excellent swimmers you see working out for a half hour or more have been training since they were children in community pools, so do not feel intimidated.

Firstly, make sure you have a pair of good goggles which do not allow any water in, otherwise it will be very difficult to complete your exercises. Also, a tight fitting bathing suit decreases resistance, promoting water flow. Trying to train without proper equipment is like painting without a canvas or brush.

Standing in the pool, practice putting your face in the water, counting three to four slow breaths and than putting your head to one side and breathing. Than try the other side. Now add the stroke, breathing every three, alternating sides. After doing this comfortably try really swimming. Your goggles should be half way out of the water when you are looking straight ahead and you should have four or six kicks per stoke. If you cannot breathe on alternating sides; try one side every other stroke, and make sure your head rests on the water when you come up for air, at a horizontal angle, not a vertical one. Imagine there is a line down the center of your body and do not let your arms cross it.

For indoor swimming in a college or Olympic size pool flip turns save time and effort. As you swim to the wall look through your goggles at the T shape, and about three feet away place one arm in front of you, getting ready to do a roll motion (imagine doing a summersault when you were a kid). About two-thirds of the way through the roll extend your legs in front of you to push off the wall, beginning to think about twisting from your back and onto your tummy as you come off the wall, doing a stroke or two before you take your first breath. Flip-turns can be practiced for a few yards in the shallow end before you apply them to your laps.

Other tools to use to make swimming easier include flippers or zoomers (shortened flippers) a floatation for the legs which sits between the legs near the crotch, and a kickboard. While the Town of East Hampton offers swimming lessons for those getting ready to take a still water or ocean test they do not emphasize flip-turns. The Recreation Center or YMCA in East Hampton should be able to recommend a decent swimming coach. I suggest an instructor because swimming is not something we can all naturally do.

Competitve rowing is mostly done out of universities and the public clubs are usually done out of them. We do not have access to rowing teams on the East End so the nearest place you can go if you want to row in a four or eight is Dowling College in Oakdale or the University at Stony Brook. Other than that some people in the community have recreational or racing shells with a sliding seat. Rowing in a row boat or dingys with just arms and back is really quite different. The Omni, American Fitness Factory, East Hampton Gym and East Hampton Recreation Center have rowing machines which simulate the motion done on a river, lake, or open water.

In the water, or on the machine, sit ready at the catch, or with knees bent, back leaning forward and arms extended. Now pull back (look at the diagram on the machine or ask an employee to see one) concentrating mainly on the leg drive, as fifty to seventy percent of the power of the stroke comes from this. Bend the back as the legs extend and be careful not to bend the elbows inward bringing the handle in until the chest has cleared the knees. Then, once the back and hips are bending backwards with the knees straight apply upper body strength. To go back up to the catch bend the arms with the back forward first, bringing this over the straight knees, than bending the knees and back into the catch position.

Until you know you have the form down because someone who rows confirmed this, do not do any long workouts. Try doing five to ten minutes at a 20 to 25 strokes per minute rating (the upper right hand corner of the ergometer readout) until you are ready to move on.

I am least experienced in competive biking so I will make this brief. We all have done recreational biking, like running when we were children, but competitive road racing or mountain biking is a different beast. Once you have the tool, a solid road or mountain bike and have checked its measurements with your own (the person who sold you the bike should help with this) then you are ready to ride. When standing over the bike frame there should be at least an inch between your crotch and the upper bar, and more room on mountain bikes and when your leg is in the vertical

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Once back in Zaporizhia, my education continued, learning more of Ukraine's history and events over the last 10 years. The Association of Private Farmers Association was registered in 1990. Originally, it was managed by the Communist Party cadres who controlled and monitored the farmers' activities at national, oblast and rayon levels so the farmers' opinions and interests had little impact on government decision making. Since 1997, with the election of a new organization president at the national and oblast level, the AFU initiated elections to aggressively reform the association. At present the AFU is planning to expand its membership base by inviting 11 million household plot landowners to join the association. The private plot owners plus the private farmers cultivate 15% of the arable land in the country and account for 60% of gross agricultural production. The main goal of the leadership of the association is to strengthen its regional infrastructure by increasing the number of active grassroots associations and by training the leaders of the associations. Ultimately, having private farmers associations represented in every oblast center and rayon and village in Ukraine.

Zaporizhia oblast is located in the southeast part of Ukraine and borders the Sea of Asov to the south. Zaporizhia oblast is divided into twenty rayons and has 1.6 million hectares of arable land. There are about 2,000 private farmers in the oblast while the total population of the oblast is about 2 million people. Grains, vegetables, fruit, pigs and poultry, and sunflowers (for oil) are the main products of the oblast. While I was in Zaporizhia itself, I met with the governor on my first trip to the city and later upon my return as I prepared to leave Ukraine. He wanted to learn of my observations and recommendations to the Private Farmers Association. I spent several days in Zaporizhia meeting with members of their Parliament, Credit Union officials, and local legislators.

The highlight of my visit in Zaporizhia was visiting the Cossacks Museum. But first, a little historical background is necessary. Like Russia and Belarus, Ukraine traces its roots to Kievan Rus, a civilization centered around Kiev a fortress on the banks of the Dnieper (niper) River founded in the 7th century to protect against nomadic tribes from the steppes. Byzantine Missionaries from Constantinople brought both its language and religion. In fact, Sts. Cyril and Methodius succeeded in converting the Rus to Orthodox Christianity in 988. Kievan Rus flourished during the 11th and 12th centuries expanding north and west into present day Russia until 1237 when it was invaded by the Tatars, a nomadic warrior people from Asia. In 1386 a dynastic union of Poland and Lithuania opened Ukraine to Polish expansion. As the Polish frontier expanded across the Ukraine, Polish nobles instituted serfdom, subjecting the peasants to the local lords and compelling them to work for them. Many peasants escaped serfdom and became known as Cossacks, from the Turkish work for outlaw. They formed communities in the vast forests of the times and became famed for their independent spirit and skills as horsemen and warriors. These independent minded people established the Ukrainian national identity.

During the 16th century both the Polish and Muscovite princes organized the Cossacks into military colonies to protect their states from Tatar incursions; however, there was constant tension between the Cossacks and their Polish masters. As warriors, the Cossacks felt they were free from serfdom and many Polish landowners viewed Cossacks as rebels and tried to enforce obedience. This provoked resentment among the Cossacks, exacerbated by the Roman Catholic Poles and Orthodox Cossacks. During the mid-17th century, resentment opened into hostilities led by hetman (chief) Bohdan Khmelnytsky. The Cossacks rebelled – the first attempt at Ukrainian independence. Ukraine was in fact independent from 1654-1657. The Cossacks waged war against Polish rule on and off for 20 years. They gained Russian protection in 1653 but this did little to further the cause of Ukrainian independence. In 1667 Ukraine was partitioned between Russian and Poland. Following the partition, the hetman successor Doroshenko made a second attempt at independence. In 1668 Sultan Mehmet IV took Ukraine under his protection and successfully invaded the Polish half of Ukraine. However, Ottoman power was on the decline and the Turks lost control of the "right bank" of the Dnieper in 1699. Next week I will conclude the "rest of the story" and my trip to Ukraine.

Interiors & EXTERIORS

Un-Shabby Chic

Comfortable, warm, informal, inviting, rustic. These are the elements of the casual, country style we favor for our homes out here on the East End. Just about everyone loves it. But what, exactly, are the elements of this style and how do we achieve it?

In general, casual rooms have simple details, textured or cotton fabrics, stripes and plaids, slipcovered, comfortable furniture and random arrangements of natural accessories. There is often a touch of whimsey, such as a bird's nest or folk craft.

Furniture styles can include rustic, American or French country, Adirondack (twig), cottage and Shabby Chic, to name a few. Many of our Hamptons homes are done almost completely in a casual style, but even these often contain a few formal elements, such as gilt frames and tailored window treatments.

To achieve a country look, build your decorating foundation on neutral colors (beige, sand, ecru) and add brighter colors as accents, such as quilts, pillows and pottery.

Furniture in casual settings is often larger in scale than that in formal environments and built for comfort and durability. This is a community built around a beach, remember, so consider sand and mud before selecting that gorgeous, striped silk Chippendale loveseat. Wicker and rattan are popular cloices for their airiness as well as their ease of care. Thrift shop finds are also a great: have a slipcover made for a worn, scruffy chair and, for a fraction of the cost, you will, essentially, have a custom made piece.

Good fabric choices are either lightly or heavily textured and matte as opposed to shiny. Natural fibers, such as canvas, wool and cotton work well in a country setting. Add one piece covered in a floral chintz as a counterpoint and you will not only avoid boredom but create a beautiful focal point.

As far as furniture selection is concerned, choose wooden pieces made from lighter woods, such as oak or pine, and again avoid shiny surfaces. This will create a more summerlike, less serious atmosphere as opposed to dark woods such as mahogany and cherry. Hardware should follow through with this theme: choose antique brass, wrought iron or ceramic as opposed to nickle or polished brass.

When it comes to flooring, the most popular choices are Mexican tile, wide pine planks, oak, and stone. Except for possibly in bedrooms, limit carpeting to area rugs made of sisal, jute, cotton and wool. Layering carpets on top of one another, if you really want to have wall-to-wall underneath, is another way to achieve the "area rug" look.

Light fixtures, whether free-standing or permanent, should pick up the trend of natural materials with wrought iron, ceramic, pottery or tin. Chandeliers in wrought iron or antiqued metals with fabric toile shades would be a way to add a little formality without losing your sense of humor.

Rustic used to mean anything but luxurious. Now, it is so trendy it borders on sophisticated. Beautiful woods and polished logs have brought 'twiggy charm' into vogue. Despite the fact that Hamptons resident Steven Spielberg owns some, it is still realtively affordable. Compliment these rough surfaces with extra soft cushions and pillows.

Remember, it's easy to go overboard with too many details. Keep accessories simple and unfussy and you'll be on your way to achieving to a comfortable, country look.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mr. Kent Gaugler, who frightened his neighbors two years ago by shooting off a shotgun on his premises, has had the reversal of his conviction upheld by the Appellate Division of the New York State Court. Gaugler had originally been charged with and convicted of criminal possession of a weapon, reckless endangerment and firing a weapon within 500 feet of a residence. The appellate decision stated that the prosecution had not been able to prove the veracity of the charges.

Mr. Gaugler is not letting matters rest. He is suing East Hampton Town and eight of its police officers for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment. He is also demanding the return of his licensed gun collection.

Riverhead, or at least a portion thereof, continues its reputation as the East End's red light district. Police arrested two "johns" for patronizing a prostitute on East Main Street. There is no mention of the lady in question.

* * *

When police saw a man drinking from a twelve ounce can of Red Dog beer on West Main Street in Riverhead (bright and early: at 7 a.m.) they attempted to arrest him, as the public consumption of alcohol is illegal. But the gentleman resisted. Police had to chase and subdue him, which occurred in a laundromat.

* * *

Next time he'll remember the air freshener. When Southampton Village police stopped Jamal Getchel of Sag Harbor on Hill Street, they had merely tagged him for a traffic violation. But the officer noted the scent of marijuana coming from Getchel's car, and the driver was charged with driving while under the influence of drugs, and possession of the unlawful weed.

* * *

And a cannibis bust came the way of Southampton Town Police, when on Country Road 39 in Southampton they saw John D. Horan of Sound Beach pull a plastic bag of marijuana of his pocket.

* * *

A crime not oft reported: seagull theft. Amy Jo Brown of Three Mile Harbor Road in Springs told police that her pet avian, Freddie Farkle, had been stolen. The owner reported that the gull had been safely ensconced in his holding pen at dark, but in the morning he was gone. There was no evidence to indicate a beast of prey had gotten at the missing bird, thus pointing to a human culprit.

In Amagansett a Sears lawn mower was stolen from a shed. As we have just passed through the long months of winter, the owner could not tell the police when the mower was last seen.

Dan's LETTERS

DAN'S FROM QUOGUE TO THE UK
Dear Dan,

Just wanted to congratulate you on the job you have done over the years. I remember being a little girl and reading your newspaper, now I'm in the UK in university and I still enjoy reading your paper, now over the internet due to the fact I'm so far from home.

I'm originally from Manhattan but grew up in Quogue; just thought I would share that with you. Well Dan, keep up the good work and hopefully I'll be reading your paper while I'm at the beach this summer in Quogue.

Sofia Fernandez

CLOSER TO THE HAMPTONS
Dear Dan,

Besides all the wonderful information that Dan's Papers has to offer, it definitely has the greatest classified section. Dan's was my source for looking for a summer job, and it is how I ended up in a summer position at a family's house in Bridgehampton. I have Dan's papers to thank for one of my most memorable summers ever!

Until I eventually reside in the Hamptons, I look forward to looking through Dan's papers for my summer jobs. I have Dan to thank for bring me closer to the Hamptons.

position, on the pedals the knee should be slightly bent, not completely straight. Bike shop workers have fitting down to an art.

Khan Ngo, of Main Beach Surf and Sport, has been a serious rider since elementary school and emphsizes the importance of being fitted for a bike. He explained that Rotations and Cycle Path both have these fancy machines to determine the right size bike for you.

While Khan says he "just rides" not getting into thought about form, Lars Svanberg, owner of Main Beach Surf Shop, and elite triathlete (he recently competed in an African Iron Man, the longest type of triathalon), says that the key to riding is in getting through the two "dead points" at the bottom and the top of the stroke, on the pedaling motion by applying more elliptical motion through the driving spin. Pedaling is not completely circular, he explains, and once that is realized and applied in technique there will be more of a flowing continuous cranking. You have to really hammer it.

I think that biking is second to running in knee injuries, and rowing is third. Again, build your stamina one day at a time before you do any long workouts, and you will find that being competitive is like "learning to ride a bike." But do not forget to wear a helmet and use bike lights. It is difficult to get a biking machine to simulate a bike, so some find that using rollers, or a bike stand, can be helpful for indoor training at home.

With right technique, equipment, and pace you can improve your training and racing skills. A good combination of these will make you a winning athlete.

I am writing this for all of us who have someone in our lives whom we love and would never want to see any harm come to. Love is a wonderful feeling, one of its benefits is it takes us away from otherwise insurmountable situations to plateaus of, "we can overcome this together".

Then there comes that dark cursed time we all dread, illness, which, with all the love in the world, is the most difficult test of that love. Do we lose faith, or do we draw from that love the strength we need to overcome even the worst situations? Our family has come to that point where we need to concentrate all our love and help one of our family members get through a dark time. Michael is my son-in-law and has been living with HVC for about ten years, that we know of. His condition was always taken very lightly because he always looked so good and was in otherwise top notch health. We all felt that with his monitoring of his diet he would live to be a hundred. Michael is the kind of guy everyone loves. He is never too busy to help anyone and always has a smile on his face. Such expressions as "mench", "he hasn't got a bad bone in his body" and many other similar phrases have been used to describe Michael. I am sure some of you had the pleasure of having Michael do a drapery or shade installation in your homes, in which case you know exactly what I mean. This past winter reality set in big time. One morning Michael went to work to do his drapery installations out in the Hamptons and on the way out he started coughing up blood. He returned home where the situation worsened, he was bleeding profusely. Michael was rushed to Stony Brook hospital where the doctors were at a loss. It was a nightmare, the weekend, with no specialists on staff and a relatively new disease which few specialists can even understand fully. It was determined that Michael's portal vein had burst due to the fact that the liver could no longer handle the amount of blood that it had to process. Michael's liver was obviously a lot more damaged than had been suspected. A new procedure for the liver, called a stint, seemed the only way to neutralize this situation. The problem now was that none of the staff at Stony brook had ever done this procedure and it is quite complicated. A stint, in as simple terms as I understand it, is a metal tube attached to the vein and inserted through the liver to relieve the pressure, hopefully stopping the portal vein from bleeding. Fortunately Michael's wife knew of such a surgeon and she called him, thank God he was home, and he rushed to the hospital to set up the procedure. Michael was saved and has been put on a liver transplant list. Anyone familiar with transplant lists must know that it is extremely difficult. There is an excellent chance that a partial liver transplant will increase Michael's chances. The liver is an organ that can regenerate itself. A doner can regenerate the piece that is donated and the recipient can grow more healthy liver tissue from the piece donated. The match is the key. Body weight has to be similar, blood type, and general health. I implore anyone who would be willing to share his or her love for life for Michael to please call Nora at 631-286-4690.

LAUREL LINKS

LAUREL LINKS COUNTRY CLUB • LAUREL • LONG ISLAND • NEW YORK

LONG ISLAND'S NEWEST COUNTRY CLUB UNDER CONSTRUCTION COMMENCING APRIL 1ST

Several years in the planning, Laurel Links Country Club now has its approvals and financing in place and is scheduled to open in the autumn of 2002! The 226-acre property is located in Laurel and will utilize 156 acres for its 7,002 yard layout. The remainder of the property will be devoted to 29 homesites and open space.

THE GOLF COURSE.

Laurel Links is designed to be like the great, old golf courses on Long Island that supplement nature without being obtrusive.

Kelly Blake Moran, golf course architect, established his reputation with nationally recognized courses like Tres Vidas Country Club in Acapulco, Mexico; the Buenos Aires Golf Club in Argentina; and the Bay Colony Golf Club in Naples, Florida, the site of the Senior PGA Tour's LG Classic. Kelly completed renovations of the Isleworth (Florida) Country Club, home course to PGA professionals Tiger Woods and Mark O'Meara; and other renowned courses.
